WHEN my eyes shall be turned to behold, for the last time, the sun in heaven, may I not see him shining on the broken and dishonored fragments of a once glorious Union; on states dis-severed, discordant, belligerent; on a land rent with civil feuds, or drenched, it may be, in fraternal blood. Let their last feeble and lingering glance rather behold the gorgeous ensign of the republic, now known and honored throughout the earth, still full high advanced, its arms and trophies streaming in their original luster, not a stripe erased or polluted, not a single star obscured, bearing for its motto no such miserable interrogatory as, "What is all this worth?"

—Daniel Webster.

PREFACE

For twenty-five years, the author of this book has constantly gathered the names, facts and incidents that compose the greater part of this history. Family traditions prove to be close to the truth and in no instance have I found them without foundation. Very few families are without any record of their ancestors, but a desire for such information is easily aroused by a general effort in this direction. I have known several instances where applications for government pensions have been denied, because the dates required in such applications, did not harmonize. Families keeping no genealogical record are sure to differ in dates and events. As the years go by and great fortunes are accumulated, their distribution requires a perfect line of descent and courts of law constantly emphasize this necessity.

History of Livermore

In writing a history of my native town, which originally included the town of East Livermore, with parts of Wayne, Leeds and Turner, together with the present town of Livermore, with the exception of Chandler's Gore, which was annexed September 9, 1833, a few items of interest concerning the natives of this region will not be inappropriate; for it speaks of a race that is now practically extinct, yet who for ages roamed the territory drained by the Androscoggin river, who fought and loved, lived and died, on the very soil we tread, and yet today are only known in history. The western part of Maine was inhabited by a race of Indians, whom we designate as Abnakis. This nation was divided into four tribes, but the tribe of which I shall speak, we call the Anasagunticooks. They claimed dominion of the waters and territories of the Androscoggin river from its source to the sea. Their encampments were in New Hampshire, in the great lake region of Maine, and at Bethel, Rumford Falls, Canton Point, Lewiston and Brunswick. This last named place, called by the Indians, "Pejepscot," was one of the great passes between the Eastern and Western tribes, where the savages met in council to plan expeditions against the English. The Anasagunticooks were a warlike people, and were less interrupted in their privileges of fishing and hunting, than were some other tribes, but yet none were more bitterly hostile toward the colonists.

Their Sagamores were Tarumkin, Warumbec and Kancamagus, called by the English John Hagkins, but the tribe wasted away during the English and French wars, and in 1747 they were unable to muster more than 160 warriors and when the Revolution began about 40 of the tribe made the shores, the ponds and the islands of the Androscoggin their principal home until the St. Francis Indians of Canada persuaded the Anasagunticooks and the Warwenocks, another tribe of the Abnakis, to unite and make their home with them for the sake of French neighborhood.

A most important deed of conveyance was made by Warumbec and other Sagamores of the Anasagunticooks, July 7, 1684, to Richard Wharton, a merchant of Boston, of a tract of land supposed to contain 500,000 acres, situated on both sides of the Androscoggin and as far east as the Kennebec river, viz.:

Beginning at Merrymeeting Bay, thence up the Androscoggin, embracing on the west, a strip of land four miles in width to the upper or great falls, thence northeast 144 miles to the Kennebec, thence down said river to the place of beginning—reserving the use of all their ancient planting grounds, and the privilege of hunting and fishing.

This was called the "Pejepscot Purchase," or Patent, and like many old deeds, owing to the indefinite description of the boundaries, and to what falls was meant—no other proprietary purchase or patent in the State has caused so much discussion and controversy. For should the tract be bounded by a northeast line from the second or Lewiston Falls to the Kennebec river, the purchase would include only a territory of eight or nine townships, perhaps in all, 200,000 acres; less than half what Wharton expected the purchase to contain. Wharton dying insolvent, his Pejepscot purchase was sold in 1714 to Messrs. Winthrop, Hutchinson, Ruck, Noyes, Watts, Minot and three others for only one hundred pounds and they claimed that their purchase extended as far up the river as Rumford Falls, thus embracing the most of Livermore. All those places on the Androscoggin river that attract the Englishman, attracted the Indian in like manner; thus Brunswick was ancient "Pejepscot" and some histories give the same name to Lewiston Falls. Canton Point was Rockomeca, which means "place for corn;" Rumford

The first part of the history is a general account of the state of the country at the beginning of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the various provinces and the different manners of the people. It also mentions the wars which were then being carried on between the king and the nobles.

The second part of the history is a more particular account of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the various events which happened during his reign, and the different wars which he was obliged to carry on. It also mentions the different laws which he made, and the different customs which he introduced.

The third part of the history is a general account of the state of the country at the beginning of the reign of King Stephen. It describes the various provinces and the different manners of the people. It also mentions the wars which were then being carried on between the king and the nobles.

The fourth part of the history is a more particular account of the reign of King Stephen. It describes the various events which happened during his reign, and the different wars which he was obliged to carry on. It also mentions the different laws which he made, and the different customs which he introduced.

The fifth part of the history is a general account of the state of the country at the beginning of the reign of King Matilda. It describes the various provinces and the different manners of the people. It also mentions the wars which were then being carried on between the king and the nobles.

The sixth part of the history is a more particular account of the reign of King Matilda. It describes the various events which happened during his reign, and the different wars which he was obliged to carry on. It also mentions the different laws which he made, and the different customs which he introduced.

Falls was named "Penecook," by its first settler, who came from Concord, N. H., and those Indians living at Brunswick were called the "Pejepscot tribe;" those at Canton Point, "Rockomeco Indians;" those at Rumford, "Pennecooks;" and yet they were all Anasagunticooks of the Abnakis nation. There is no doubt that before the white man bared the hills and rich bottom lands in Livermore of its burden of timber and wood, that the Indian built his wigwam, hunted, fished and roamed over every one of its 32,000 acres. Indeed, we have ample evidence of this in the relics found from time to time on the shores of every lake and pond and on the intervalles of the Androscoggin.

The finest specimen of an Indian stone hammer that I ever saw, was found on the farm of William Green Griffith. I have in my possession a beautiful stone gouge, picked up by my father on the shore of Round Pond in 1867, and also a stone hoe found on the farm of J. T. Lyford. In 1861 William K. Wyman found three tomahawks under the stump of an old tree on the bank of the Androscoggin, and Tristram Hillman also found Indian relics farther down the river. A finely moulded, reddish colored pipe and a stone hatchet were ploughed out of the ground on the farm of Israel Washburn and a large stone mortar pestle, now in the Washburn Library, was found at Hillman's Ferry.

The largest stone mortar that I ever saw, was found on the old Thompson homestead. It is of the same pattern, but of twice the capacity of that in Plymouth Hall, Mass. It can be seen at the home of H. P. Berry, who owns the original Thompson estate at North Livermore.

The Indians' genius was mechanical; a few specimens of their sculpture in stone are resemblances of men, beasts and fishes. They ascertained the true qualities of many herbs, plants, barks and roots. They imparted this knowledge to our race and learned us to make snowshoes and spear fish by torchlight. Their "homony" was corn, broken in a mortar and boiled; their "nokehike" was corn, parched and pounded; "suckatash" was composed of corn in the milk and green beans. They taught us to raise maize, or Indian corn, by manuring the soil with fish, planting it when the leaf of the white oak "is as big as a squirrel's ear," and hoeing it in hills. Different tribes of Indians have different dialects, though no one tribe ever had an alphabet, and nothing mortal can be the subject of more perpetual change than a language never written—never reduced to letters. Their manner of counting will show us the affinity of the Tarrantine or Penobscot dialect, to that of the Anasagunticooks.

Land they called "keag," to which they prefixed other qualifying words, as "Penops-keag," which means "rockland;" "Cunds-keag," "legland;" "Medawam-keag," "ripples or pebblesland;" "Spum-keag," "heavenland." The territory embraced in the State of Maine, was called "Mavoo-shen." Pierpole, who died at Lake Umbagog in 1825, was a friend to Deacon Livermore and the last Anasagunticook Indian to visit the town of Livermore.

Among Deacon Livermore's papers I found, in what I suppose to be his own handwriting, the following:

I wonder if Dea. Livermore thought when he penned the above lines, that 139 years to a day afterward, an unknown hand would be copying and strange faces scrutinizing the memorandum that he made on that day.

THE BEGINNING

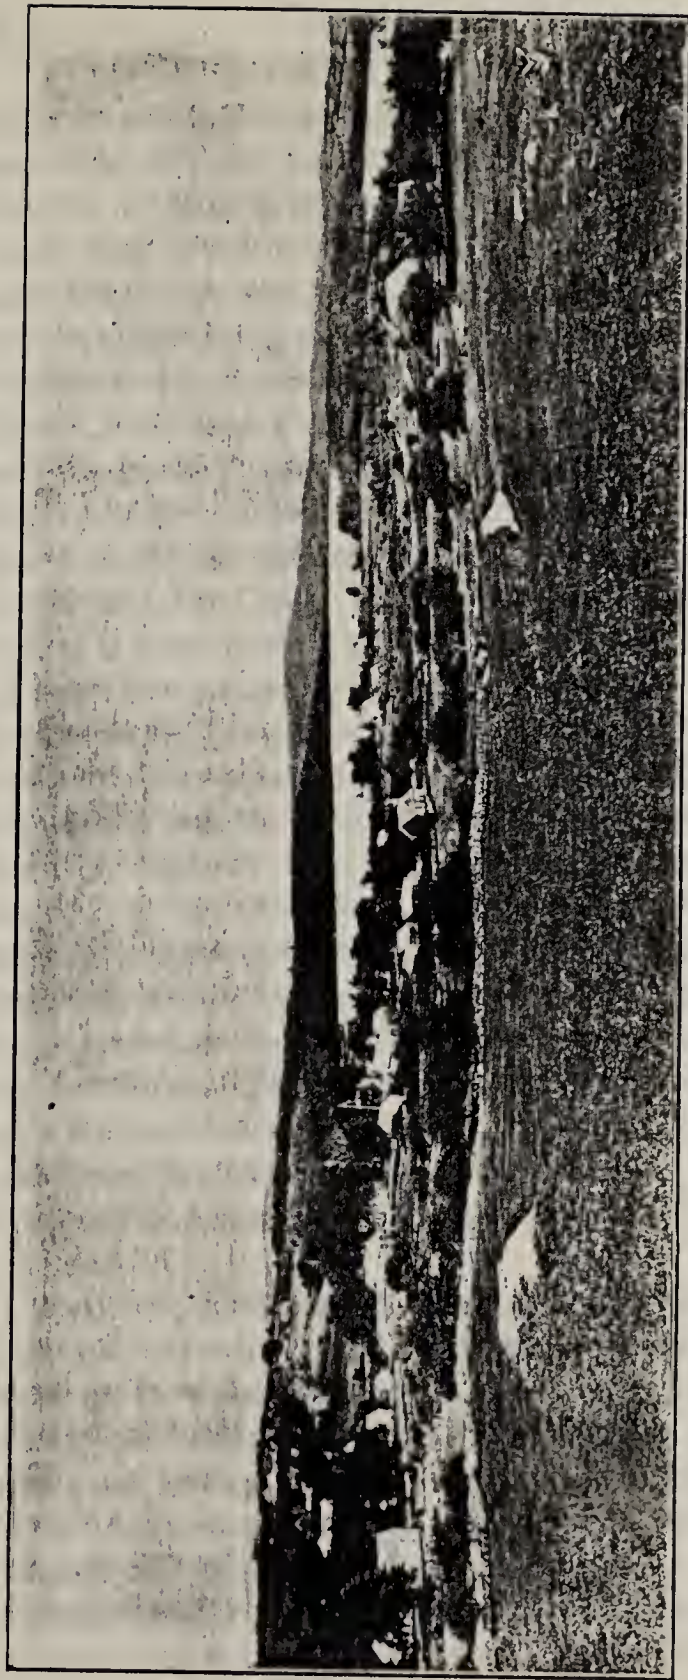

During the war between England and France an expedition consisting of twelve English and twenty-four American sail was dispatched from Boston, Sept. 18, 1710, for the capture of Port Royal, a seaport town in Nova Scotia. This fleet arrived and landed its forces on the 24th and on the first day of October had batteries erected within one hundred yards of the town, which after a severe cannonading, surrendered to Queen Anne of England, with the provision that all prisoners were to be transported to France or be permitted to remove to Canada, or Placentia, as that province was then called. The English loss in this engagement was fifteen men, beside twenty-six who were drowned by the wrecking of a transport. The conquest of the entire peninsula soon followed and Nova Scotia has ever since been a British Province, an event highly important and interesting to the State of Maine and especially to the town of Livermore.

Among the soldiers of this expedition who assisted in the reduction of Port Royal, sixty were from Waltham and surrounding towns, but not until 1735 did they or their heirs, petition the General Court of Sessions for any gratuity for services rendered. In this year, through Nathaniel Harris, Esq., a petition for a township of land in Her Majesty's Province of Massachusetts Bay, adjoining the Connecticut River, was granted and some of the proprietors took possession and expended money in the improvement of the new plantation. In the course of years a dispute arose regarding the boundary between what is now the State of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, and the plantation, when a survey was made and the State line established, to the proprietors' "great loss and Disappointment, fell within the Bounds of New Hampshire Province."

In 1770, these same petitioners or their heirs and assigns, through Samuel Livermore, Leonard Williams and George Badcock, again petitioned the Court of Sessions, called at this date the House of Representatives, for a grant of land as the equivalent of the one lost, and on the 11th of June, 1771, the prayer was granted with these conditions, viz.: "That the Grantees within seven years settle sixty Families in said Township, build a House for the public Worship of God, and settle a learned Protestant Minister and lay out one sixty-fourth part for the first settled Minister, one sixty-fourth part for the Ministry, one sixty-fourth part for the Use of Schools and one sixty-fourth part for the use of Harvard College forever." The petitioners were instructed to locate this grant of land "in some of the unappropriated lands in the Province of Maine to the eastward of Saco River, adjoining to some other former grant." Armed with this authority, and acting for the petitioners, Samuel Livermore and Leonard Williams appointed Lieut. Elijah Livermore and Elisha Harrington as executive officers to carry out the enterprise and push to completion the planting of a township in the Province of Maine that was destined to be successively named, "Oxford Royal," "Port Royal," "Liver-ton," and finally Livermore.

We find this record, containing the necessary instructions to these officers which is copied verbatim. "By virtue of the Power vested in us by the foregoing Grant we appoint you jointly to lay out said Township, with such other assistance as you shall find necessary, with the follow-

Given Under our Hands this ninth Day of August 1771

Between this last named date and April 27th, 1772, Elijah Livermore and Elisha Harrington explored the Androscoggin valley and selected the land lying on both sides of the river and adjoining "Sylvester," or Turner, on the north, according to their instructions, and reported to the Proprietors at a meeting held at the house of Samuel Livermore in Waltham, June 17, 1772. At this meeting a committee, consisting of Elijah Livermore, Ebenezer Learned and Richard Woodward was elected to run the lines around and divide into lots the land that had been selected for the Township and on Aug. 18th of this year a party consisting of Ebenezer Waters as surveyor, Elijah Livermore and Richard Woodward as chainmen, and Thomas Fish and Ebenezer Learned as assistants, started from Waltham and at Boston they took sail and arrived at Hallowell via the Kennebec River, landing about a mile below Fort Western, on the 25th; from here they traveled to Winthrop where they arrived at noon on the 27th and spent the rest of the day searching for a boat. Being unable to find any or even materials with which to make one, they moved forward to Samuel Frost's, about two miles from Wilson Pond, where they fortunately found boards, and on the 28th Maj. Fish commenced building a boat and with the help of Ichabod Howe completed it by noon of the 29th. In the afternoon they launched the craft, loaded their provisions and equipage, crossed Wilson Pond and at sunset were encamped on the western shore.

From here the next morning after a short carry, over the divide, by the Indian carrying place, to Androscoggin or Wayne Lake, they once more embarked and steering westerly across the pond, entered Dead, or as it was called then, Lucy's River, and soon after emerged into the Androscoggin and landed at Dailey's Mills near the mouth of the stream which they named Brush Brook. Presumably, the next day was occupied in arranging their camp and preparing for the task before them, for on the first day of September, 1772, they run the first line of the first lot in the town of Livermore. The house of C. E. Emerson and that known as the Washington Dailey place, directly opposite, are on lot No. 1; Lot. No. 2 is the Orren Bryant farm; a part of lot No. 3 is owned by James Wood of Lewiston and in like manner, following the river eastward to Strickland's Ferry and thence northerly, up as far as the Walter W. Wing farm, they continued the lotting and here they turned and run out a tier of lots adjoining, and on the west of those already located, back to the east line of lot No. 2, missing their objective by five rods, according to the old plan now in the Washburn Library.

When we consider the character of their instruments, and the degree of accuracy required, together with the fact that this line was more than three miles in length, we conclude that the surveyor was competent and although tradition says that Deacon Livermore, who carried the rear end of the chain, contrived to smuggle in a "long step," for every measurement, we must admit that their work was more reliable than some of that done by other parties in neighboring towns. These twenty-two lots thus far located, on account of the area of each, and the sinuosity of the river, do not corner together but are constantly jutting by each other, a fact that has puzzled many a later surveyor not acquainted with this circumstance who has attempted to trace the lines described. The rest of the lots run out by this party are 160 rods east and west by 100 rods north and south, the corners meeting and the lines parallel to each other.

In the survey and allotment made and returned by this party, the area embraced within a line drawn from the bank of the river near Dailey's Mills due west until it intersects the original town line 400 rods south of Brettun's Mills, thence northerly to the vicinity of the farm owned by W. H. Drake, thence due east by the south line of Asa S. Goding's farm, crossing Round and Long Ponds, past the north side of the old Loney graveyard until it strikes the river and thence by the river to the place of beginning, would include what is called the "First Division," because it was just the survey made by this party, during the months of September and October, 1772, and presented, together with the plan thereof, to the Proprietors, at a meeting held at the house of Isaac Gleason in Waltham, Nov. 11, 1772. The expenses of the surveying party were paid at this meeting and amounted to £113, 7s., 8d. Lots were drawn, sold and exchanged; taxes assessed and collected; meetings held and the new township was "boomed." April 30, 1773, Maj. Thomas Fish, William Foster, Ebenezer Gleason and David Mixer sailed from Boston in the sloop "Sally," Capt. John Martin, for Falmouth, bound to Oxford Royal as they called the new township. They cast anchor at 3 P.M. May 2d, in Falmouth roadstead and the next day started overland via New Gloucester, Little Androscoggin and Sylvester, for the lot which Livermore had chosen on which to erect his camp and on which in after years he built the house, still standing, and known as the Deacon Livermore place. It appears that Livermore, with his hired help and cattle, had preceded Maj. Fish and his party, for somewhere in New Gloucester both parties including "Dea. Livermore's hired hands, with four oxen and a horse," joined company and together, through thicket and brush, through forest and stream, camping on the damp ground and sleeping in wet garments they toiled forward, animated with thoughts of the glowing future, and at sunset on the 17th day of May, when within one mile of Livermore's lot, and being desirous of spending the night there, Dea. Livermore and Maj. Fish, leaving the others in camp, started through the woods and becoming bewildered, spent the night on an "Island" in the meadow just east of where J. B. Dicker now lives. In the morning they recognized the "lay of the land," and soon reached their destination. It is a matter of record that all of this party with the exception of Dea. Livermore, returned to Massachusetts, although making frequent visits to the plantation, but Livermore might have remained here during the winter of 1773-4 for in Maj. Fish's diary, we find that on May 7, 1774, he found Dea. Livermore "well at his camp" and from the fact that this was Fish's first visit in this year, and considering that it was too early in the season for planting, we conclude that, perhaps, the Deacon might have spent the previous winter in his camp on the well known Livermore place.

And then the dark days of the Revolution came; men thought of oppression and liberty; of resistance and freedom, and they let the wilderness of Maine alone until a nation was born and a page added to the leaf of history.

Then came the longing for new homes; the project that had remained dormant for six years, revived into life, and in 1779 Lieut. Elijah Livermore with his family, came and established themselves at his "Grand Camp," and were the first actual settlers in the town of Livermore.

THE BIRTH OF LIVERMORE

Probably the most ancient document preserved in town, actually proved by written evidence and bearing on its pages the dates and signs of age, is an old ledger book, covered, bound and stitched with hog's hide, with its first page elegantly and plainly written over and bearing the date of Wednesday, the 28th of May, 1735. This book holds all the information we have of the why and wherefore of the grant of Livermore, by the "Great and General Court for His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England," to the original proprietors, few of whom ever settled here, choosing to sell their land rather than brave the wilderness of Port Royal. We can realize the trouble, expense and vexation of sending a committee from Waltham, to the unexplored regions of Maine, there to select, run boundary lines; describe and locate to the satisfaction of those interested a tract of land that might or might not please those that it was intended to benefit.

Then the shares or lots were drawn, each individual taking the claim that chance allotted, taxes were assessed on the same and if delinquent sold to the highest bidder, and by the way, nearly every share was sold, not once but many times. Meetings to this effect and for other business, followed each other in frequent succession from the above date until Dec. 25, 1774, when as the record pertinently states, "Upon considering the dark aspect of public affairs," they adjourned to a meeting never assembled. All these meetings were either held at a private house or at some "Innholder," the most favored place being at Isaac Gleason's. Once they met at the house of Samuel Livermore and by reason of sickness in the family adjourned to that of Isaac Gleason. Upon the breaking out of the Revolution, the clerk wrote an explanation of the non-assemblage of the proprietors and the yellowed pages of this book gives us this graphic account of the state of affairs then: "The distressing war with Great Britain breaking out April 19, 1775, and all being obliged to resist the enemy, the place to which the meeting of the Proprietors was called, as likewise the meeting for sale of delinquent Proprietors being so near the theatre of action, prevented any meeting whatever." No meeting was held from this date until Jan. 13, 1779. In March following they voted, "That they build a boat or boats provided any person or persons appear to go to said Township to build an house and clear Land with intent to dwell there." On Jan. 9, 1793, at a meeting held at the house of Benjamin Bird in Waltham, it was voted to confer with the inhabitants of said Township respecting building a meeting house, and elected Gen. Learned, Edmund Davis and Capt. Moses Stone as a committee to request the Court of Sessions to lay out a county road through the township. On the 4th of September, same year, they voted to build a meeting house in this town, fifty feet long and forty feet wide, to be set at the east end of Lot 36, first division, and also raised £150 to erect the house, finish the outside and build a porch at the door and underpin the building. Chose Dea. Elijah Livermore, Sylvanus Boardman and David Learned a committee for the above purpose.

There is no record of anything more in regard to this matter, but the sequel was told by our grandfathers and handed down by word of mouth and I wrote it down from the lips of one long since gathered home. It is this: The place chosen for the site of this church, was on the hill and near the buildings formerly owned by C. R. Babb; a bee was made to fell timber and clear the spot and two men, David Handy and Isaiah Manly by name, were accidentally killed by the falling of a large tree. They accepted it as a premonition of destiny and abandoned the entire project.

THE LOTS AND THE LOTTING

“The first Division,” or that part of this town surveyed and lotted during the months of September and October, 1772, and all that part of the town on the west side of the river to the north and south of this “Division,” including a strip of land from the northerly part of Sylvester 445 rods in width that was afterwards claimed by Turner and relinquished by Livermore at its incorporation and all of the town of East Livermore, then a part of this Plantation including the territory set off to Wayne and Leeds, after Major Thomas Fish completed the lotting thereof, contained 256 one hundred acre lots, excepting those bordering on the river, which, owing to the sinuosity of that boundary, were as near the others in size as might be, but of irregular dimensions. My authority for the above facts may be found in the complete line of record books belonging to the town of Livermore and also from an old sheepskin plan, drawn by Capt. Williams of Beverly, Mass., in 1787, which I am sorry to say was destroyed by fire, when the town clerk’s office burned at Brettun’s Mills in 1887. The lotting of the entire original area of Livermore and East Livermore, then one township, was shown by this plan and although not bearing the stamp of authority, like the earlier incomplete one now in the Washburn Library, yet I believe it was correct and a few words in relation to it, written when it was in existence, may possibly to some one be of value. This plan was evidently used for business, as the house and barns of Dea. Livermore are distinctly marked thereon, although it might have been done since Williams’ hand so deftly drew the course of the Androscoggin and checked into squares and parallelograms the lots of the old Plantation of Port Royal. On many lots the names of the original owners were written, tote roads marked, that part claimed by Turner indicated, fords located and other evidence of later conditions that could not have been known by Capt. Williams at the time the plan was made.

My convictions are that this plan was made by Capt. Williams from minutes furnished by Major Thomas Fish, duly authorized to make and complete a survey of all unsurveyed lands in the township, or in other words, "The Second Division." Commencing at Otis Falls, on the east side of the river, a tier of lots of unequal area and bordering on the river was located down to and past Dead River, each lot embracing its share of the rich and level "Intervale." The first lot bears the name of Henshaw; the next two that of Elijah Livermore; the next lower, Hall; next, L. Williams; and that by Hillman's Ferry being No. 10. The east line of these lots ran due north and south as far down river as "Shy;" from here to Littleborough on account of a bend in the river the lots set over to the east a number of rods. Then beginning at the extreme north-east corner of the town and running out a tier of lots westerly until they struck No. 1, or the lot at Otis Falls—then another range lower, and still a third and fourth and here we are at "Shy." Then the lots are numbered in ranges running north and south as far down as Littleborough or Leeds. According to this plan there are sixty-eight lots on the east side of the river. The country to the east is marked "Sterlin," and the first road indicated by dots, runs from North Wayne to and across Hillman's Ferry and one other from Wayne village to and across the old Benjamin Ferry and up to Dea. Livermore's. Among the names of the lot owners on the east side of the river are the historical ones of Henshaw, Woodward, Grahn, Davis, Capt. Denny Learned, Greavy, the Hessian soldier, who, after the Revolution, settled on the lot east of Lieut. Samuel Benjamin's, and Elijah Livermore, who owned many lots on both sides of the river. On the west side, we find on the lot now owned by John Sanders, the

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice, and that these documents should be stored in a secure and accessible location. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data.

The second part of the document outlines the procedures for handling discrepancies. It states that any differences between the recorded amounts and the actual cash flow should be investigated immediately. The document provides a step-by-step guide for identifying the source of the error, whether it is a clerical mistake, a misclassification, or a more serious issue like fraud. It also discusses the importance of transparency and communication with stakeholders when such issues arise.

The final part of the document provides a summary of the key points and offers some concluding remarks. It reiterates the importance of diligence and accuracy in all financial reporting and encourages the reader to adhere to the highest standards of professional conduct. The document ends with a note of appreciation for the reader's attention and a contact information for further assistance.

name of Daniel Coolidge; the next to the north, Isaac Fuller; next, where W. H. Bickford now lives, Cutting Clark; next, where R. E. Bisbee lives, Jones; and the next, Weld. Then we have the names of Hathaway, Boardman, Holman, Shenery and Norton. Amos Livermore owned the lot where A. J. Ryerson now lives, and Isaac Lovell lived on the farm now owned by William H. Thompson. So much for the old plan that had no title and perhaps would not bear the test of law.

As has been stated previously, the original township was given to sixty men for services rendered in the French and English war in 1710, and an old Massachusetts State law required that the ministry, schools, etc., should each receive a gratuity equal to that of an individual appropriation.

And now the township had been divided into lots and the next step was to divide the lots among the Proprietors, and a little mental arithmetic will prove that each one was entitled to four lots, as also was the ministry, first minister, schools and Harvard College, therefore, sixty-four tickets, with a group of four lots to each, every ticket being arranged so as to preserve equality in value, were prepared and each Proprietor drew the ticket that chance allotted and became the owner of four one-hundred acre lots in the new township.

The names of the original proprietors, or of those who claimed under them, were as follows:

Nathaniel Harris, Esq.	Warham Williams, Rev.
Samuel Googen, Capt.	Thomas Marshall
Benjamin Flagg, Copt.	Ebenezer Hubbard
Ebenezer Woodward, Capt.	William Chubb
Ebenezer Larned, Capt.	John Maddock

Up to the incorporation of Livermore as a town in 1795, the books and plans of the Proprietors were kept in Waltham, Mass., where all business relating to the township was transacted and it was not until Nov. 2, 1812, that the inhabitants of Livermore "chose W. H. Brettun, Esq., to convey the original plan and books of this town from Gen. Jonathan Coolidge of Waltham," and it is of and about these same books and plans, that I have written. It can be readily seen, now the lots were drawn, that each proprietor was the owner of one sixty-fourth part of the township; consequently, those that came here with the intention of making a home for themselves felt the need of public improvements, first in the form of roads and bridleways, then the post-route and a schoolhouse, and to secure these, taxes were assessed and if the owner refused or neglected to pay, the lot was sold for the tax and those with a little ready money who seized the opportunity of securing a hundred acres of land with a small outlay, found themselves the owner of many lots, that as the settlers increased in numbers, steadily rose in value.

The following table shows the population of the United States from 1845 to 1900. The population increased from 16,500,000 in 1845 to 76,000,000 in 1900. The increase was most rapid between 1870 and 1900, when the population grew by more than 50%.

Among the first to perceive this inevitable result, was Lieut. Elijah Livermore, afterwards familiarly called the Deacon, who always had an eye for business, and whenever a valuable lot was sold for taxes, invariably became the purchaser, and as the land value increased, so did the Deacon's revenue, and he became the most wealthy and "forehanded" person ever in the town of Livermore.

During all these years of hardship and uncertainty for the settlers, they were fortunate in their intercourse with the Indians, experiencing no trouble and often receiving aid from them; indeed, the territory lying on both sides of the river from here to Lewiston Falls, seemed to be the middle ground of peace between the white man and Indian, but at Pejepscot and Penecook falls, to the north and south of us, there was frequent trouble and bloodshed, and even on the western shore of Anasagunticook or Whitney Lake in the neighboring town of Hartford, they show the spot and tell the pathetic story of how a man by the name of Whitney was wounded in a fight with the Indians and secreted himself in a cabin until nearly recovered and then, being mistaken for an Indian, was shot dead by a party of friends sent to his rescue.

There is no reliable record of the order in which the first settlers came, after the first three or four families were firmly established; in fact, there is no written record whatever, except the arrival of Lieut. Elijah Livermore's family; all else is by word of mouth that was handed down from father to son; but among the papers of the widow of Gen. David Learned, who was born in 1766, we find in her own handwriting a list of the "established settlers," living on both sides of the river in 1789. They are as follows:

Dea Elijah Livermore, William Carver, Elisha Smith, Samuel Benjamin, John Walker, Josiah Wyer, James Delano, Reuben Wing, John Monk, Otis Robinson, Cutting Clark, Elijah Fisher, Pelatiah Gibbs, Daniel Holman, Henry Greavy, Nathaniel Dailey and Mr. Randall. My own researches lead me to believe that there were a few more, but the phrase, "established settlers," might possibly explain the difference of opinion.

Rev. Paul Coffin, a traveling missionary, says in his diary of 1798, that Livermore contained 130 families who were "superstitious, ignorant and predestinarian." He visited in this year Dea. Livermore and his son, "who had fifty cattle, many sheep and horses, a house large and high, of four rooms and two chimneys, and four barns and four sheds."

In 1800 he visited Dr. Hamlin and says that he "spake much with the Dr. who seemed to suppose, as others also told me, that he had lately experienced the new birth. He is much of a predestinarian Baptist. He said we regular clergy teach people to do their best and then by fifty or sixty years they may arise to a ray of hope."

I think it is a fact that a missionary preacher, traveling on horseback and asking no remuneration except what might be freely offered, attracted more attention than, and caused more serious thought of the possibilities in and of a religious life, by preaching to and visiting among the people who were hungry for sociability, once a year as did Elder Coffin, than do the clergy of today by the Sunday sermon and semi-weekly prayer meeting. In those and later days to attend church was an event; it was the only method of exchanging and hearing the news, good or bad, and whatever was heard, was the subject of thought for weeks and months.

As has previously been stated, the first book of record, bound and stitched with hog's hide and dating from 1735, is a curiosity, as also is the next dating from 1795. The leaves of these books are unruled and as a great many different clerks, moderators and Justices of the Peace, displayed their handwriting, the chirography is diverse and the lines angular.

The book, dating from 1795, begins with the record of the first town meeting, held at the house of Dea. Livermore and in this book the clerk recorded intentions of marriage and whenever so returned the date of the ceremony.

The list will be interesting to some, although we cannot harmonize a few of the dates.

THEN AND NOW

From 1809 to 1814, it was the custom of the assessors to enumerate the houses, barns, mills and all cultivated, mowing, orcharding, pasturage and wild lands and the value of each, to ascertain the taxable worth of each man's real estate. The value of the different items of personal property did not vary so much from that of today, as we might suppose.

To show the change that has taken place between "Then and Now," let me give the several items in taxable real estate of a few well-known farms in the year 1813, and then you can compare them with the value of such today.

Haskell, Jacob, who at this time owned what is now known as the Noyes Stock Farm. House, $15; 2 barns, $77; tillage, 7 acres, $84; mowing, 7 acres, $70; pasturage, 8 acres, $64; wild land, 78 acres, $234; total, $544.

Pompilly, Samuel, who lived on the farm now owned by D. R. Briggs. House, $50; barn, $96; tillage, 2 acres, $24; mowing, 8 acres, $80; pasturage, 5 acres, $40; wild land, 100 acres, $300; total, $590.

Elliott, John, Dea., who owned the farm and built the house where Mr. E. H. Hinkley now lives. House, $40; barn, $30; tillage, 1 acre, $12; mowing, 1 acre, $10; no pasturage; orcharding, one-half acre, $20; mills, 2, $400; wild land, 20 acres, $80; total, $592.

Livermore, Samuel; Dea. Elijah Livermore's youngest son, who lived at this time where Lewis Leavitt now lives. Two houses, $500; three barns, $112; tillage, 30 acres, $360; mowing, 15 acres, $150; pasturage, 6 acres, $48; wild land, 339 acres, $1,356; total, $2,526.

Livermore, Isaac, who built a two-story house near "Cat Corner," one room of which he used as a store. The land is now owned by S. H. Beckler and not a vestige of the buildings can now be seen. House, $100; barn, $50; tillage, 2 acres, $24; mowing, 7 acres, $70; pasturing, 10 acres, $80; wild land, 90 acres, $270; total, $594.

Lovewell, Isaac. He lived on the farm now owned by W. H. Thompson on Lovewell's Hill, now called Water's Hill. House, $400; 2 barns, $85; tillage, 3 acres, $36; mowing, 20 acres, $200; pasturage, 20 acres, $160; orchard, one acre, $40; wild land, 107 acres, $428; total, $1,349.

Livermore, Hannah, the Deacon's widow, was in this year taxed with $1,000, at interest.

Morse, Jonathan, lived on the Hamilton Marten place, now owned by Adney D. Boothby. House, $75; barn, $15; tillage, 2 acres, $24; mowing, 2 acres, $20; pasturage, 4 acres, $32; wild land, 42 acres, $84; total, $250.

Keith, Ebenezer, lived on the farm now owned by his grandson, Marcus M. Keith. House, $30; barn, $40; tillage, one acre, $12; mowing, 4 acres, $40; pasturage, 6 acres, $48; wild land, 89 acres, $267; total, $437.

Pierpont, Sarah, widow of Robert the 1st; she was a daughter of Deacon Livermore and inherited his farm, now owned by E. E. Putnam. House, $100; 4 barns, $80; tillage, 6 acres, $72; mowing, 8 acres, $80; pasturage, 8 acres, $64; wild land, 130 acres, $390; total, $786. She was also in this year taxed for $2,000 at interest.

Fuller, Samuel, the father of John, Philander and Samuel, Jr., who at this time lived on the Simeon Brown farm, now owned by Theodore Russell. House, $20; barn, $20; no tillage or mowing; pasturage, 2 acres, $16; wild land, 45 acres, $90; total, $146.

There were eleven orchards in town with a total area of seven and one-half acres, valued at $300. Thirteen mills, valued at $2,200. Stock in trade, $490, and $4,300 at interest, taxed in this year—1813. In 1812, the total amount of municipal orders drawn was $366.57, and those for the support of schools amounted to $497.72.

In 1802 the town and county tax was $205.62. At the present time the law allows the assessors to combine the State, county and town tax in one assessment and the collector pays to the State, county and town treasurers their respective proportion, but in the early history of this town a distinct assessment was made for the county and for the town tax.

In 1803, there was a road tax, minister tax, school tax, county and town tax; all made separate and with a different rate per cent for each.

During these first years of the town's existence, an immense amount of road tax, as compared with that raised in money, was worked out by each individual; not in repairing, but in building the highways that traverse our town in every direction. One would almost suppose that they located the roads over the highest hills from that innate proclivity of the Yankee to always be on top and uppermost. Deacon Livermore brought the first horse into town as a pack animal, May 17, 1773, and not for many years were they generally used as a mode of conveyance in traveling; the man in the saddle and the woman seated on the "pillion" behind, holding on to the driver for support. A wooden shod sled was used for transporting goods, etc., and as late as 1810 for hauling hay both summer and winter.

The "bridle way" was the forerunner of the "cart road," and the earliest "highway" was accepted in 1795. Today, not one-half of the families in town own a saddle or ever saw a "pillion." Private individuals established "Post Routes," to Hallowell and Portland or to some point that touched the government lines, and carried the mail in saddlebags, delivering to each as he passed their door the paper or letter addressed to them. This was the first style of "Free Delivery;" let us hope that the next will be broader and more general. What would children think now of going to a neighbor's to borrow fire? Remember, they had no matches then, and to lose their fire was like losing yeast, you had to get some to have more. The way they carried fire from one house to another, was to take a live coal and placing it in a handful of ashes, run for home and with the help of bellows start the fire. Now, every coat has a "match pocket," and one-half of the male sex carry matches whether at home or abroad.

The hourglass, and noonmark on the windowsill, told our grandfathers the "time o' day." Now, stem-winding, second-splitting gold watches are an everyday affair. The old wooden plough and crotch harrow, the spring pole, mortar pestle and Dutch oven, the beater and winnowing fans, and a hundred other primitive necessities, are replaced by modern labor-saving inventions.

Throughout the town we find the remains of ancient tanpits; an excavation in the ground curbed so as to hold the liquor in which the hides were pickled for three years and came out as leather; not so finely dressed or so fashionable as that tanned in thirty-six hours today, but leather that would stand grief and last a lifetime. The warping bar, reeds and shuttle of the old loom in which our grandmothers wove the family raiment, are unused and covered with the dust of years and the stock and cravat, the calash and sampler, the slut, snuffers and extinguisher, the spit, warming pan, footstove, sickle and flintlock gun, are preserved only as mementoes of the past; while the electric light, the telegraph and telephone, railroad and steamboat, the Mauser and Krag-Jorgensen rifles, the mower and reaper, corn-planter and harvester completely revolutionize our daily life and labor, and place us in touch with the world. The annual day for fasting and prayer has become a time for feasting, sport and merriment. The denominational baptism of church applicants through midwinter ice is now considered imprudent. The ancient "Blue Laws" of Connecticut made it a penalty for any mother to kiss her child on Sunday and the Puritanical code of Salem dealt severely with any person who on the Sabbath stepped outside his own gateway for any other purpose than religion and charity. The pessimist considers any modern innovation with mournful solicitude and makes the social atmosphere chilly with "sack-cloth and ashes," while the optimist rejoices in anything that improves our situation in morals, privileges, comforts and blessings and thanks God that he lives now.

THE FIRST MEETING-HOUSE, THAT NEVER WAS BUILT

When this township was granted to the sixty soldiers who assisted in the reduction and capture of Port Royal, N. S., it was stipulated that one 64th part should be set aside for the first settled Minister, one 64th part for the use of the Ministry, one 64th part for the use of Schools and the same for Harvard College. Thus the entire township was to be divided into 64 equal parts, and there being four times as many lots, each beneficiary would receive four lots.

One of the lots for the Ministry was No. 36, on Bradbury Hill, and on Jan. 9, 1793, the Proprietors of the township of Port Royal held a meeting at the house of Benjamin Bird in Waltham, Mass., and it was "Voted to confer with the inhabitants of said Township respecting building a meeting-house." On Sept. 4, 1793, they "Voted to build a meeting-house in this township, fifty feet long and forty wide, to be set at the east end of Lot 36," and also raised 150 pounds to erect the house, finish the outside, build a porch at the door and underpin the building. They elected Dea. Elijah Livermore, Sylvanus Boardman and David Learned a committee for the above purpose. Lot 36, before referred to, was the "Minister Lot" and is the farm now owned by Clinton R. Babb, and the church was to have been erected on the east end or very near where the farm buildings now stand. The reader must understand that this church was not denominational, but was for the benefit of the township, and consequently a "bee" was made for the clearing of the spot, the hewing and framing of timber, and at which two men, Isaiah Manly and David Handy by name, were accidentally killed by the falling of a large tree. They accepted it as a premonition of destiny and abandoned the enterprise.

HISTORY OF THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The Baptists first began their work in this State in 1681, and were persecuted as heretics. Rev. William Sereven, born in 1629, came here in early life and became their religious teacher and during his labors was fined ten pounds and "ordered no more to hold religious service," and that "Mr. Sereven in future forbear from his turbulent and contentious practices, give bonds for his good behavior and stand committed until the judgment of the Court be complied with." This was the light or rather the darkness with which any new religious doctrine was viewed by the Puritanic people who made religious laws purely for the sake of enforcing them. Dating the actual settlement of Livermore from 1779, we can readily see that perhaps ten or a dozen years must elapse before a sufficient number of families were firmly and comfortably settled so that some thought would be given toward the observance of the Sabbath with its Bible teachings, and about this time certain itinerant preachers traveling through the settlements on horseback, preaching in barns, log cabins or wherever they might, aroused religious thoughts, and denominational arguments naturally followed so that competition built up circles of Baptists, Methodists and Universalists. About this time Rev. Paul Coffin, one of these traveling missionaries, says in his diary, that "the people of Livermore were superstitious, ignorant and predestinarian." In 1798 he visited Dea. Livermore and his son "who had fifty cattle, many sheep and horses, a house large and high of four rooms and two chimneys, and four barns." In 1800 he visited Dr. Hamlin and says that he "spake much with the Doctor, who seemed to suppose, as others also told me, that he had lately experienced the new birth. He is much of a predestinarian Baptist. He said we regular clergy teach people to do their best, and then by fifty or sixty years they may arise to a ray of hope." However, seven years before this conversation took place, a Baptist church was organized in the barn of Henry Bond, now owned by Manter Cummings. At that time it stood fifty feet north of its present site, but the same floor is in it yet on which August 7, 1793, the seventeen men and women who regarded duty paramount to a frescoed ceiling, consecrated themselves to this work. Under the authority and guidance of Elder James Potter and James Alexander of Bowdoin, Elder Isaac Case and Deacon William Briggs of Winthrop, Elder Eliphalet Smith, Deacon Joshua Walton and Eleazer Goodwin of Stirling (Fayette) the following persons organized themselves into the First Baptist Church of Livermore:

Daniel Holman, Peletiah Gibbs, Isaac Lovewell, Elisha Williams, Otis Robinson, Henry Bond, James Delano, Zeb-

edee Delano, Thomas Wyman, Peter Goding, David Reed, Anna Gibbs, Hannah Robinson, Mary Delano, Susanna Wyman, Grace Delano and Catherine Walker. Their names are familiar to us, and descendants well known, nearly all being represented by families living in town at the present time.

For a season they worshiped in the school-house that stood where Sylvester Norton lived, but in 1799 built a small church on the Loney ledge a few rods north of the old graveyard, which they occupied until 1807, when a more commodious church was built on the common at North Livermore. In 1885 the last remnants of the horse block could be seen, from which the ancient tythingman and giddy girl alike did mount, and today some of the timbers, the last relic of the church on the rock, are framed into the woodshed of the old Jimmie Chase buildings. No doubt the proposition of building a church on the common, stirred up the zeal and interest of all classes to great energy in building a meeting-house larger, better and on a grander scale than any in town or in the region round about. To this day the proportions, style and arrangements of this building are quoted by the octogenarians as an example to modern church builders. The first thing that greeted the eye as you stepped into the porch, was the long, smooth publishing board, and as you entered the audience room the first thing that met your gaze was the high, scoop-like sounding board directly over the preacher's head, and it must have required a level head to have occupied the pulpit, for it was at least eight feet above the congregation. A gallery with two tiers of pews ran around three sides; that directly opposite the pupilt occupied by the singers. It is as interesting to hear the old people tell of the customs and doings of these ancient choirs, as it is to observe the peculiarities and actions of those of later date. At one time they had a long red curtain hung in front and as soon as the hymn was given out, this was drawn, that curious eyes and listening ears might not see and hear the directions of the leader: the tuning of strings and fixing of furbelows, so that when all was ready and the veil parted, a sudden burst of harmony accompanied the equally sudden appearance of the choir. Numerous and fierce were the bickerings and jealousies that pervaded the singers' seats in those days. At one time a certain left-handed fiddler became obnoxious to the performer on the double-bass and was finally ejected from the choir. For retaliation the fiddler in an opportune moment greased the strings of the double-bass with a piece of pork, so that at the first stroke of the bow the old instrument only whispered. To prevent any such contingency in the future, the owner of the big fiddle built for it a large box or case, secured by a padlock. The next Sunday there appeared on some convenient post or corner these doggerel lines:

“Farewell, ye double-bass;
Your strings are greased with meat;
Your owner's locked you in his case,
And Rose his pork must eat.”

It is said that when all things were pleasant the bass-viol was simply immense, but when trouble was brewing, it could play so near the key and not hit it, that it confounded bassoons, fiddles and all. The membership of the church rapidly increased, enrolling many prominent men in town, and here let me say that two ministers have represented the town in the Legislature, viz.: Rev. Sylvanus Boardman in 1802, and Rev. Philip Munger in 1846; the first a Baptist and the other a Methodist. Its male members have been from the start and now are, far above the average both in ability and means.

Four of the original charter members became Baptist ministers, viz.: Otis Robinson, ordained in 1798; Zebedee Delano, 1799; Elisha Williams, 1799, and Thomas Wyman in 1806. The first nine years in this church's history, it was without a pastor, nevertheless, one hundred and one members were added to the rolls. During this period a strong opposition led by Sylvanus Boardman, endeavored to form a Unitarian Congregational church and to build a meeting-house; and perhaps the reason of their failure to do so, was that Boardman was converted to the Baptist faith and was in 1802, ordained as minister of the very church that he tried to belittle, and served as such until 1809. Rev. John Haynes was the second minister and faithfully served them as such from 1811 to 1821. Rev. David Nutter, who came from England, received a call to become their pastor in 1823, and was remarkably successful as such at first, but he had the habit of frequently resigning, apparently to test their support. At one time they inadvertently accepted his resignation and Rev. John Hull became their minister for a few weeks; when it became known that Nutter desired to remain and Elder Hull's feelings being somewhat exercised, a queer state of church affairs existed for some time, but Elder Nutter remained until 1833. Rev. Nathan Chapman was invited to settle with this church in 1835 and labored with them for two years, but on account of the divided condition of the church at the close of the third pastorate, his position was not to be envied. Rev. Charles Miller, born in Scotland and usually called Father Miller, was the next pastor, coming in 1840 and closing his labors with this church in 1844. In 1841 the Evangelist, Elder John Butler, came and under the steady guidance of Father Miller, the revival called the "Butler reformation," occurred, in which sixty-one united with the church.

Rev. John Billings was the next pastor, coming in 1844 and closing his pastoral work here in 1845. Rev. A. B. Pendleton came in 1846 and one night in 1847, the church on the common was burned, but, by its glowing embers, plans were made to rebuild a more costly and modern edifice, in a better place, where it can be seen today, a monument to its people. The house was erected at a cost of $1,839.52 and dedicated in January of 1848, and the next year Elder Pendleton closed his work with this church; three years of work with heart and hand and a work well done.

In 1849 Elder David Nutter returned and renewed his service with the church until 1853, when he retired from active work but continued for many years to live at North Livermore.

Rev. Lucius Bradford came as pastor to this church in 1853 and faithfully served its people and society until 1858. Rev. William Durfee was ordained as their pastor in 1859 and continued as such for two years, or until December, 1860.

Rev. E. S. Fish, a very scholarly and dignified man, was called in 1861 and continued as their minister until 1870. This period embraced those years of excitement and suspense, during which the North and South struck those blows that wrought the shackles of slavery into plowshares and gave to the world a flag without a blot or stain. Whatever else of this church can now, or may be said in years to come, whether its walls echo the true or a false doctrine, or its members march in disorder or with a solid front, this fact remains: Its doors were always open and its hands ready to uplift and sustain with a loyal heart the principles of a perfect government. Many a box and barrel filled with the comforts of home, found its way to the Sanitary Commission for the boys in blue, and many a bandage and roll of lint for the hospital, came from this church and society. Mr. Fish, during his pastorate, was respected and honored by his townsmen and beloved by the church.

Rev. Carleton Parker came in 1871, and he and his estimable wife did much toward harmonizing the entire community. In this year the church edifice was thoroughly repaired and some changes made in its arrangements. A fine chandelier, the gift of Erastus and Arad Thompson, was hung in the church and a new carpet laid, thus making a very pleasant interior. In 1874 the society was called upon to mourn the decease of him whose honesty of purpose was never doubted. This was the first time in the history of the church that its pastor was removed by death.

Rev. J. R. Herrick was settled as pastor of this church in 1875 and remained until 1880. During his pastorate he baptized forty and the church enjoyed unusual prosperity. Mr. Herrick being a young man and having an interest in the various occupations of life, soon made his influence felt outside of the church limits. His kindness to the poor and needy was one of the many virtues he possessed.

Rev. L. P. Gurney followed, commencing his labors Jan. 1, 1881, and occupied the pulpit for three years. As a sermonizer he had few equals and being gifted with a good voice, both for singing and speaking, he soon acquired many admirers, but the uncertainty of his health induced him in the third year of his pastorate to offer his resignation.

Rev. W. H. S. Ventres received a call to preach in this church in 1884, and although he possessed education and ability, yet he failed to successfully guide the many different elements that go to make up church society. In the spring of 1884, Arad Thompson of Bangor, presented the church with a beautiful toned bell in memory of his father and mother who were prominent members of this society. The bell, which weighs between twelve and thirteen hundred pounds and has cast in its rim these words, "In memory of my father and mother," was placed in position May 17, 1884.

Rev. Orrin Richardson began his labors as pastor over this society in September, 1885, and remained until August, 1888. He was an energetic man and quickly distinguished the right from the wrong.

Rev. G. W. Colby came to this church in June, 1890, and served the society as pastor until October 18, 1896. He was a very active worker in church and society and it was owing to his energy and perseverance that the one-hundredth anniversary of the church's existence was so happily celebrated, Oct. 5, 1893.

Rev. A. D. Graffam accepted the pastorate and began his work January 17, 1897, preaching his farewell sermon, Jan. 8, 1899. He was an eloquent speaker and highly esteemed by the society, although in the church there were dissensions. In May, 1900, Rev. E. H. Doane began his pastorate, but on Oct. 8, 1901, he suffered from paralysis which rendered very active work impossible.

Rev. W. H. Rice came in 1905 and he and his wife immediately associated themselves with the community in general. He was as successful in the pulpit as among the people and was a valuable member of the community. Rev. John G. Vance became the pastor in 1910. He was a brilliant sermonizer and met with more moral support outside of the church than among its members.

Rev. W. D. Hetherington came in 1912 and only remained one year. We understand that he is located in Connecticut and is now pastor of a Methodist church.

Rev. J. Frank Jones was called to this church in 1914, and remained nine years. He was a gentleman in every sense of the word and he worked for unity and good-will on all occasions. His wife was a great worker among the sick and unfortunate and she and her husband had a large circle of acquaintances. Rev. Mabel C. Johnson, the first woman preacher to be called to this church, in the one hundred and thirty years of its existence, came in 1924 and is still holding the interest in church work and the attendance at Sunday service. There is a "Ladies' Union" connected with this church, that is a wonderful help in the financial department.

HISTORY OF THE METHODIST CHURCH

To the Congregationalists who emigrated from Massachusetts to Livermore previous to 1800, undoubtedly the Methodist Church of this town owes its birth. At the house of Otis Robinson who lived at Gibbs Mills, on Feb. 12, 1793,

Rev. Jesse Lee of Virginia, b. 1758, d. 1816, and known as the pioneer of Methodism in New England, preached the first sermon of this faith in town. In 1795 at the house of Deacon Livermore who, before he came to Livermore, was a deacon of the Congregational Church in Waltham, Mass., Rev. Philip Wager, a Methodist, preached the next sermon and a class was then and there formed. Dea. Livermore cast his religious efforts with the Methodist, rather than the Baptist denomination, and gave the land, to be used solely for this purpose, and his energy and financial help toward the erection of the "Old church that stood on the common at Livermore Center."

In 1803, Rev. Joshua Soule, d. 1808, aged 65, preached the dedicatory sermon and established a church that has had on its roll the names of many influential families; a church that is still active in town; a church that works for the good of mankind and seeks not influence and money, but only to do its Master's bidding. Originally this house had a gallery on three sides, but in the course of time those at the sides were removed and the walls of the building cut down and lowered. In 1856 the remaining gallery, opposite the pulpit, was made smaller and lowered and a large window placed in the south front. The first pastor was Joshua Soule, and then followed John T. Adams, Dr. Henry Adams, Samuel Hillman, Samuel Thompson, John Wilkinson, David Stimpson, Aaron Humphrey, Eli Howe, Allen H. Cobb, Joshua Randall, Charles Virgin, Philip Munger, George Webber, D.D., David Copeland, Abel Alton, Benjamin Burnham, Asa Greene, S. P. Blake, Benjamin Foster, Alvah Hatch, John True, Joseph Gerry, James Farrington, Daniel Dyer, E. H. Gammon, Samuel Ambrose, Daniel Waterhouse, Caleb Mugford, Joseph Hawks. W. C. Stevens, S. W. Pierce, 1858. S. B. Bailey, 1859. S. S. Grey, 1860. Nathan Andrews, 1862. Isaac Lord, 1863. Francis Grosvenor, 1866. M. B. Cummings, 1868. Jonathan Fairbanks, 1869. Thomas Hillman, 1871. H. B. Until 1858 the parsonage stood on the old discontinued road leading from "Cat Corner," direct to the Center, but on the 29th of September of this year it was moved bodily to where it now stands, next west of J. H. Thing's residence. But alas for the old church, its children left home and must needs worship elsewhere. Scenes of joy and sorrow, of prosperity and adversity have been its lot, and today it is but a monument, perhaps more so to me than to others, for within its walls I first labored with the old-fashioned "Catechism," and listened to a sermon of one and one-half hours duration in the forenoon and another of equal length in the afternoon, capped with the privilege of hearing the "Pillars" of the church "exhort."

Its ministers were sincere and devoted, but not educated to the requirements of today. How well I remember its pulpit with its red curtains, and studded with brass-headed nails. On each side were balustrade railings and directly in the rear was a small window that shed its light on the desk. Once the curate was sternly describing the downward road to evil that so many were traveling, and bringing his clenched fist down like a sledge-hammer, missed those brass-headed nails in the desk by the skin of his knuckles, and then like the honest old Methodist that he was, calmly raised his hand and gazed inquiringly at the bruised fingers. From this same desk I heard a preacher proclaim that his faith was so strong that if he should ask the Almighty to raise the whole audience up to Heaven, that right up they would go; and I heard another vividly describe Abraham's willing sacrifice of Isaac, and finished up the account by saying that "Abraham was about to strike the match," etc. This brought us down to the nineteenth century with a jolt and jar. Before the Civil War Elder Randall, who will be remembered as an active and energetic abolition and temperance lecturer, addressed an evening meeting in this church, and to more forcibly illustrate the iniquity of slavery, exhibited a genuine slave driver's whip. During the lecture it was passed around among the audience and some mischief-loving youth succeeded in cutting off the snapper and great was the ire thereat. That same boy is alive now, a gray-haired man.

In 1871 the members of this church who resided at North Livermore, purchased the old Col. Jesse Stone tavern and remodeled it into a neat and commodious house of worship and organized a church with 27 members on its roll.

In 1877 the Methodists in and around Brettun's Mills erected a chapel at that place and later bought a parsonage for its resident minister who supplied fortnightly at the North Livermore church until it was abandoned.

But alas for the old historical Center church! In 1907 it was sold, taken down and removed to Rumford Falls, and made into a boarding house. Its doorsteps are used for culvert stones on the road leading from North Livermore to Livermore Falls.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH AT THE NORLANDS

This church, that is such a conspicuous landmark for miles around, was raised June 9, 1828, and dedicated in 1829. When the timbers of the spire were raised, a sailor from Bath, who was imported for the occasion, climbed to the top and slipped an iron ring over the apex, that bound them together. The hundred people, regardless of denomination, who assisted in the erection of the frame, gazed in admiration of the first church in town with a steeple. At this time the nearest Universalist church was at Farmington on the one hand, and at Buckfield on the other. Some one asked Isaac Lovewell, a stern Baptist, who had assisted at the "raising," what he thought of the spire, and Lovewell said in his droning voice, "That it would be a good place for the Devil to light when he flew from Farmington to Buckfield."

A row of horse-sheds were on the East and North sides of this church, each individual building his own, and all uniform in construction. The last to remain standing belonged to Isaac Lovewell, previously mentioned. The ministers, who somewhat regularly and intermittently preached in this house, were Rev. Jeremiah Stoddard, who died in 1875, aged 81; Rev. Thomas Barnes, Rev. Butterfield, Rev. B. Streeter, Rev. William A. Drew, Rev. Jabez Woodman, Rev. George Bates, Rev. Sylvanus Cobb. These ministers preached in different places provided for them by the people until the church was built and thereafter Rev. Bates, Rev. Drew, Rev. Seth Stetson, Rev. Stoddard, Rev. Woodman, Rev. George W. Quimby, Rev. Ezekiel Vose, Rev. Robert Blacker, Rev. Fredric Foster, Rev. W. R. French, Rev. D. T. Stevens and Rev. O. H. Johnson. During the Civil War many funerals of soldiers were held here, attended by Rev. O. H. Johnson, who told me that during the conflict he attended over two hundred funerals of soldiers who were killed or had sickened and died; this, of course, covered a wide territory in which he labored during his life. This church was renovated, the old singers' gallery at the south end closed from view, the doors to every pew removed, a platform built entirely across the north end of the church, beautiful memorial and stained glass windows replaced the old ones and it was rededicated in 1873. Edward Chapin of New York, preached the dedicatory sermon from the text: "God is a Spirit; and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." I remember how he looked when he said, "Ah! how many would do so, if it wasn't for that fire-edged Hell over there." Annie Louise Cary sang, the church was crowded and it rained a perfect deluge. Through the generosity of the Washburn brothers a fund, the interest of which can be used for the repair and upkeep of this church, is available every year. The steeple became out of repair and decayed and was replaced exactly like the original by William Drew Washburn at a cost of $600.00. He also gave a fine-toned bell to this church.

In 1892, March 16th, Charles Shaw, a "Steeplejack," while attempting to straighten the rod of the vane, fell to the ground and was instantly killed.

In connection with this church and The Norlands, the Washburn Memorial Library should be mentioned, for they all come under the care of the trustees of the Washburn estate. Hon. E. B. Washburn, during the years of 1884 and 1885, erected, on the Washburn estate, a fine library building, and on August 5, 1885, with appropriate exercises, dedicated it to the memory of his father and mother. The library building is of Hallowell granite, and contains many pictures and relics that are priceless in value. Among the oil paintings can be seen the picture of John Brown, who in an attempt to free the slaves, became a hero, but lost his life Dec. 2, 1859. Many distinguished men were present at the dedicatory exercises.

Hannibal Hamlin, W. P. Frye, following the address of E. B. Washburn, spoke to an audience of fifteen hundred people.

In 1869 the Universalist Church at Brettun's Mills was erected and in November of this year it was dedicated; the Rev. Amory Battles of Bangor, preaching the sermon. Through the energy and generosity of the residents and with the help of the "Ladies' Sewing Circle," a large bell was placed in the tower in 1870.

ADVENT CHURCH

The belief in the Church of the Advent is by no means modern in Livermore, although its neat and modest chapel, in South Livermore, was erected in 1902.

They held their meetings for many years in the old school-house that now serves for a horse-shed to this church. As a rule they hold services regularly, either by preaching or Sunday School and this church and also the neighborhood has always endeavored to observe the Sabbath.

BAPTIST CHURCH, SECOND

In 1811 by the efforts of Elder Ransom Norton, a Second Baptist Church was organized with a membership of seventeen. A church was built in 1819, at the intersection of the road leading past the house of E. R. Boothby, with that leading past the house of R. E. Pike. It was taken down and rebuilt very near to the North Turner Bridge Cemetery, in 1842. It lost its organization and was sold for $20 in 1911.

BENJAMIN, SAMUEL.

B. 1753; d. 1824; m. Tabitha Livermore, b. 1757; d. 1837. She was a second cousin to Deacon Livermore.

Children: Billy, b. 1785; d. 1849. Samuel, Jr., b. 1786; d. 1871. Nathaniel, b. 1788; d. 1867. Betsey, b. 1790; d. 1860. Polly, b. 1792; d. 1865. Martha, twin of Polly, b. 1792; d. 1861. David, b. 1794; d. 1883. Charles, b. 1795; d. 1834. Elisha, b. 1797; d. 1852. Ruth, b. 1799; d. 1869. Samuel Benjamin was a Lieutenant in the Army of the Revolution and distinguished himself in many ways. Deacon Livermore's influence brought him to this town and on Oct. 10, 1782, he bought of the Deacon what we now know as the Abijah Child farm. Lieut. Benjamin returned to Watertown, Mass., from whence he came, but in the spring of the following year, accompanied by his newly wedded wife, he came to Livermore with the purpose of establishing a permanent home. During the erection of his log house, that stood on the easterly side of the road running north and south as now traveled over Waters' Hill and close to the south line of his land, he lived in Major Fish's log cabin at the junction of the old discontinued road leading northerly from "Cat Corner," with the present one running from Livermore Center to Gibbs' Mills. When we remember that he was the fourth settler with a family, actually living in the new "Grant," the necessity for traveling over two and one-half miles, after the day's labor, for the sake of having a roof over his bed and a wife to cook the breakfast, is apparent.

In the spring of 1796 he became part, and later, full owner of the mills and water rights known as Gibbs' Mills in Livermore and from the fact that on May 13, 1794, he sold to Abijah Child (who immediately took possession), his farm, reserving "timber for his buildings," we presume that he must have resided near his new purchase until early in 1798, when he bought Lot 11 on the east side of Androscoggin River, where he lived until his death in 1824. A man respected and honored by his townsmen.

Children: Billy, b. 1785; d. 1849. Samuel, Jr., b. 1786; d. 1871. Nathaniel, b. 1788. Betsey, b. 1790; d.

1860; m. Samuel Morrison. Polly, b. 1792; d. 1865; m. Samuel Ames. Martha, twin to Polly, d. 1861; m. Israel Washburn. David, b. 1794; d. 1883. Charles, b. 1795; d. 1834; m. Lucy Chase. Elisha, b. 1797; d. 1852, in New Orleans, La.; m. Joan Sawtelle. Ruth, b. 1799; d. 1869; m. Jonathan Lovejoy.

BENJAMIN, BILLY. Of these:

B. 1785; d. 1849; m. Phebe Wellington, b. 1788; d. 1869.

He was called "Colonel," which title he earned in the State Militia. His wife, Aunt Phebe, as she was familiarly called, was a dear and kind old lady as I knew her, and during her widowhood made annual visits among her friends where she was always welcome. At this time she lived in a house, now removed, at Livermore Center, standing opposite to and a little north of the present school-house.

BENJAMIN, SAMUEL, JR.

B. 1786; d. 1871; m. Olivia Metcalf, b. 1795; d. 1879.

He resided in Winthrop and became celebrated as a maker of excellent agricultural implements. His granddaughter, Mary Louise Benjamin, is the author of the Benjamin Genealogy published in 1900.

BENJAMIN, NATHANIEL.

B. 1788; d. 1867; m. Betsey Chase, b. 1793; d. 1854.

In his youth he studied medicine but became a farmer and minister and was one of four partners, the others being Rev. Samuel Hillman, Ransom and James Norton, who agreed to come here, take up lots and for one year share equally the profits and losses of the enterprise. He chose the lot next west of Ransom Norton's and built his camp on a pleasant knoll by the Tan House brook just north of the road as now traveled. Returning one day from his work, he found his cabin in ashes, but persevering, he finally built the Boardman house, now owned by Miss H. V. Ross. In 1802 he became pastor of the First Baptist Church at North Livermore and in 1810 moved to Yarmouth and from there to New Sharon, where he died. He had eight children, four of whom died and the graves of two can still be seen in the lane on the westerly side of the road opposite to the house.

The children who can be traced were: Sally Phipps, b. 1795; d. 1815. Holmes O., who has descendants in New Hampshire. George Dana, Rev., b. 1801; a missionary to Burmah, where he died in 1831, leaving one son, Rev. George Dana Boardman, of Phila., Penn. Frances G., b. 1808; m. Joseph Bullen, New Sharon. In 1893, when the Baptist Church at North Livermore celebrated its 100th anniversary, Rev. George Dana Boardman of Philadelphia, who was the principal speaker on this occasion, visited the old house, built by his grandfather, and in this room in which his father was born, offered a simple and touching prayer.

The first part of the report deals with the general situation of the profession in the United States. It points out that the number of physicians has increased steadily since 1900, and that this increase has been particularly marked in the rural areas. It also notes that the average age of the practicing physician is increasing, and that this may have a bearing on the quality of medical care.

The second part of the report discusses the various factors which influence the distribution of physicians. It points out that the concentration of physicians in the cities and in the more affluent areas is a serious problem, and that this results in a shortage of medical care in the rural areas and in the poorer sections of the country.

The third part of the report deals with the question of the standardization of medical education. It points out that there is a wide variation in the quality of medical education in the various states, and that this results in a lack of uniformity in the standards of medical care.

The fourth part of the report discusses the various methods which have been suggested for the improvement of medical education. It points out that the establishment of a national board of medical education is one of the most important steps which can be taken to bring about a more uniform standard of medical education.

The fifth part of the report deals with the question of the regulation of the medical profession. It points out that the various state medical boards are not uniformly organized, and that this results in a lack of uniformity in the standards of medical practice.

The sixth part of the report discusses the various methods which have been suggested for the improvement of the regulation of the medical profession. It points out that the establishment of a national board of medical regulation is one of the most important steps which can be taken to bring about a more uniform standard of medical practice.

The seventh part of the report deals with the question of the improvement of the medical service. It points out that the various methods which have been suggested for the improvement of the medical service are all of great importance, and that they should be carried out in a coordinated and systematic manner.

CARVER, WIDOW.

With seven children, came from Duxbury, Mass., in 1779, and was the second family to settle in Livermore, the children, nearly grown up, making their first "pitch" on the Hunton farm in East Livermore, at what was then the head of boat navigation on the Androscoggin. After remaining here a few weeks, they removed and again made a "pitch," on the farm now owned by John M. Hinds in Livermore. William, the oldest son, selected this "Improvement," and the foundation and doorrock of the log house that he built can still be seen, unmoved and just as he placed them with his own hand in 1779, about thirty rods westerly, and within the limits of the road as now traveled, from the house of J. M. Hinds. While he was building this house, he lived between two immense boulders, about thirty rods to the south, that made a natural and convenient camping place. On this lot, No. 33, the family lived until 1785, when, (See Dea. Peletiah Gibbs.)

The Carver family consisted of the mother, then a widow, but whose two husbands must have borne the name of Carver, for the oldest son, William, was half-brother to the other children, James, Amos, Nathan and three girls, one of whom married Cutting Clark; one died and the other untraced.

CHILD, EPHRAIM.

Their eldest son, b. 1760; d. 1825; m. Lydia Livermore; d. 1803, aged 38; 2d, Mrs. Abigail Herrick Smith. He purchased of Samuel Livermore, May 13, 1794, a lot of land in Livermore, bounded on the south by lot 53; easterly by Long Pond; northerly by the "Last Division;" westerly by Round Pond and land of Amos Livermore. The grantor reserved the right to build a dam at the outlet of Round Pond and also all flowage by reason of his mill at the outlet of Long Pond and the right to cut pine timber that he needed for his buildings. At that time the farm buildings were very near the south line of the lot and on the east side of the road as now traveled. The ancestors of Ephraim came from England in 1630 and the records of the Genealogical Society of Boston, show that the family motto was "Imitate not those who are envious." Children:

CHASE

In 1629 William, Thomas and Aquilla Chase came to this country from England. In 1639 Thomas settled in Hampton, N. H. The descendants of Thomas Chase, who m. Elizabeth Philbrick, are in this order, viz.: Isaac, m. Mary Tilton; Thomas, m. Jean Smith; Thomas, m. Elizabeth Athern; Samuel.

CHASE, SAMUEL.

B. 1734; d. 1801; m. Jedidah Claghorn, d. 1807. They, with their children came from Tisbury, Martha's Vineyard, Mass., to Livermore in 1790, and bought of Zebedee Delano the farm midway between Loney Corner and Gibbs Mills on the easterly side of Long Pond, where they built the house, since burned, and at that time owned by the town as a home for its poor. They are buried in the old Fuller yard without a stone to indicate their graves.

Children: (2d Gen.) Thomas, b. 1755. Betsey, b. 1761; d. 1840; m. Ward Tilton. Sarson, b. 1762; Olive, b. 1766; m. James Norton. Tristram, b. 1768. Prudence, b. 1776; m. Apollus Jones.

CHASE, THOMAS. Of these:

B. 1755; d. 1844; m. Desire Luce, b. 1756; d. 1851. They lived and died on the old place; it is very probable that he cleared the most of the land and built the house, as his father at that time was well advanced in years. He was in the War of the Revolution and served on board a privateer which was captured on the coast of England, and he spent 23 months as a prisoner, when he was exchanged and sent to France, where he enlisted and served on the ship "Alliance" that was afterwards commanded by John Paul Jones. Mr. Chase was small in stature, while his wife was equally large, and when they rode on horseback she occupied the saddle and he the pillion. In the latter part of his life he broke his arm and afterwards always wore a tin cylinder to strengthen the fracture.

The first part of the report deals with the general situation of the country and the progress of the war. It is a very interesting and valuable document, especially in view of the fact that it was written by a person who was in a position to know the truth about the situation.

The second part of the report deals with the military operations of the army. It gives a very detailed account of the various campaigns and battles, and also of the tactics employed by the army. This part of the report is particularly interesting, as it shows the progress of the army and the success of its operations.

The third part of the report deals with the financial situation of the country. It gives a very detailed account of the various sources of revenue and the expenditure of the government. This part of the report is particularly interesting, as it shows the financial progress of the country and the success of its financial operations.

The fourth part of the report deals with the administrative situation of the country. It gives a very detailed account of the various departments and the progress of their work. This part of the report is particularly interesting, as it shows the progress of the administration and the success of its operations.

The fifth part of the report deals with the social situation of the country. It gives a very detailed account of the various social problems and the progress of their solution. This part of the report is particularly interesting, as it shows the progress of the social reforms and the success of their operations.

The sixth part of the report deals with the foreign relations of the country. It gives a very detailed account of the various diplomatic relations and the progress of their development. This part of the report is particularly interesting, as it shows the progress of the foreign relations and the success of their operations.

At this time, 1790, there was a road running from Abijah Childs' southeasterly, toward the south end of and around Long Pond, past the pound, to Gibbs Mills. On the westerly side of the pond and on this road, the brothers built their houses and lived, Sarson owning the west half and Tristram the east part of the lot until 1795, when the road leading over Waters Hill being located, Sarson abandoned his first "pitch," and built the buildings where I. W. Fuller and afterwards his son, Elisha C., lived. It was while living in the first mentioned house that his first wife died and according to the custom of those days she was buried on the farm. In 1880, E. C. Fuller, wishing to improve the land where she was buried, obtained permission of the proper authorities to remove the remains to the Fuller yard. Upon digging down, the outline of the coffin with the exception of the cover, could be plainly distinguished, but not a vestige of any remains could be found in the soft, mouldy earth that filled the casket.

CHAPTER 10. THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The first part of the book deals with the early history of the United States, from the time of the first European settlers to the end of the American Revolution. It covers the exploration of the continent, the establishment of the first colonies, and the struggle for independence.

The second part of the book deals with the history of the United States from the end of the American Revolution to the present. It covers the early years of the republic, the expansion of the United States, and the Civil War.

The third part of the book deals with the history of the United States from the end of the Civil War to the present. It covers the Reconstruction period, the Gilded Age, and the Progressive Era.

Louisa, m. Moses Morse (Jay). Polly, m. Marshall Warren (Jay). Sullivan, m. Hepsey Luce (Livermore Falls). Columbus, m. —Leach (Calais).

CLARK, CUTTING.

M. Lucy Carver and was one of the pioneers of this town, making his pitch on the farm now owned by W. H. Bickford. His house stood opposite and across the road from the present one. He was the foremost hunter of the town in his day, having slain more bears and told the biggest stories, of any man whose reputation has been handed down to us by tradition. He was the son of Capt. John Clark of Newton, Mass., who married Hannah Cutting, and their daughter, Hannah, b. 1740, m. Dea. Elijah Livermore.

Children: Betsey, b. 1786. Hannah, b. 1788; m. Dea. West Robinson (Livermore). William, b. 1790. Samuel, b. 1792. John, b. 1794. Lucy, b. 1796.

We have been told that Cutting lived to be very old and that some of his descendants reside in Dixfield and that one who emigrated to the West, had the old man's long-barreled bear gun.

COFFIN, NAPHTALI.

B. 1776; d. 1870; m. Abigail Kincaid, b. 1782; d. 1853. He lived on what is known as the Atwood farm, the same being now owned by F. D. Merrill. I well remember Mr. Coffin as going about with a wooden leg, having suffered the loss of one by amputation in early life. The circumstances as related to me by his son, Warren, are as follows: He was at the raising of the barn frame now owned by Cyrus Rose, and was walking on one of the upper timbers, dragging a rafter, one end of which, striking some obstacle, caused him to lose his balance, when he fell, breaking his leg below his knee in such a manner that the bones protruded through the flesh and actually penetrated the ground. A rider was immediately sent to Winthrop for Dr. Small, and upon his arrival, having no saw with which to saw the bones, Warren was sent to the nearest neighbor, John Gibbs, for a stiff-backed saw, and without stimulant of any kind, after many hours of intense pain, quietly and without any visible signs of emotion, submitted to the amputation of his leg with instruments never intended to be used on anything more precious than common wood. Cyrus Rose told me that the actual spot penetrated in the ground by the broken bone was marked with a circle of stones and that it was under the barn where his cattle stood.

Children: William, b. 1800; d. 1856. Nancy, b. 1802; d. 1894; m. Hezekiah Atwood. Stephen, b. 1804; d. 1809. Warren, b. 1806; d. 1890; m. Betsey Crowell, d. 1884, aged 77. Sally, b. 1808, d. 1883; m. CAMPBELL, JOHN. (2d Gen.)

B. 1813; d. —; m. Mahalia Hewitt. Mr. Campbell told me that he well remembered when there were only five houses and a store between the bridges at Brettun's Mills. His father lived in a little, unpainted house where Col. Lee Strickland lived; William H. Brettun where Mrs. Olive Millett lives; the other three were the Frank Francis house; the Samuel F. Perley house and the "bat-house," that stood near where the band stand is located. The store stood on the same spot where W. F. Fuller now trades. There was also a fulling mill at the upper dam, driven by an overshot wheel, under which he was nearly drowned. The proprietor used to give him one cent apiece for every mouse he caught in the mill. He saw his brother, Ebenezer, drown under the upper bridge at the outlet of the pond.

DELANO, ZEBEDEE. (1st Gen.)

B. 1727; was one of the early settlers of Winthrop, then called Pondtown, and his children were:

(2d Gen.) Seth, b. 1751. Ruth, b. 1755; m. Aaron Stevens of Fayette. James, b. 1758. Sarah, b. 1763. Zebedee, Jr., b. 1767; m. Abigail Cottle in 1791. Ebenezer, b. 1771; m. Nancy Titus in 1793.

The record relating to the Delano family when in Winthrop, says that at one time Mr. Delano was reduced to such extremities for food that he "subsisted on boiled beech leaves for some days." Of these children, James, Jabez, Zebedee and Ebenezer came to Livermore, cleared the land, established homes, and with the exception of Zebedee, lived and died here.

DELANO, JAMES.

B. 1758, d. 1829, and his wife, Mary, sister of Thomas Wyman, d. 1835, aged 80. He was in town in 1789 and settled on the farm now owned by Orin Rich, and his children were: (3d Gen.) Abel, b. 1785; Sophia, b. 1787; m. John Simmons of Canton. Calvin, b. 1791. Leonard, b. 1794. Samuel, b. 1797; untraced.

DELANO, ABEL. Of these:

B. 1785; m. Miriam Wormell, d. 1825, aged 40. 2d, Betsey Norton, dau. of Zebulon. Abel lived in several places in town and for many years was miller at Brettun's Mills, but died at North Turner, leaving one son, Sylvester, a veteran of the Civil War.

DELANO, CALVIN.

B. 1791; d. 1856; m. Lucinda Reed, d. 1831, aged 33. 2d, Lucretia Richards, d. 1863, aged 59. Calvin was of a mechanical turn of mind and in 1849 patented a horserake that came into general use among the farmers. He also invented a sidehill plough that harrowed the furrow as fast as turned. He lived on the Orin Rich farm and afterward in East Livermore, on the place next east of the Collins Richards farm, near the railroad, and is buried in the Gibbs yard in this town.

Children: 1st wife (4th Gen.) Charles Granderson, b. 1818 (Mass.). Prudence Pitts, b. 1820; m. Manson Woodman (Farmington). Flavilla H., d. 1843, aged 17. Lucinda, d. 1840, aged 10.

Children: 2d wife, Lucretia Roselle, b. 1833; m. C. H. Barden (Farmington). Mary C., d. 1837, aged 1. Mary C., b. 1839; m. Capt. L. H. Daggett (Boston). Susan M., b. 1841; m. John A. Sheppard, d. 1867, aged 27, a soldier in the Civil War. 2d, George O. Eustis of Livermore Falls. Sybil H., b. 1844; m. H. A. Brown (Iowa).

DELANO, LEONARD. (3d Gen.)

B. 1794; m. Nancy Delano, d. 1870, aged 74. He lived for many years on the west side of the road, midway between the house of E. H. Gibbs and that of J. M. Drury, and died in indigent circumstances.

DELANO, JABEZ. (2d Gen.)

B. 1760; d. 1848; m. Grace Daily. 2d, Polly Campbell, b. 1793; d. 1847. He was a Revolutionary soldier and first

CHAPTER I

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject. It discusses the scope and objectives of the study, and outlines the structure of the book. The author also discusses the sources of information used in the study, and the methods employed.

The second part of the book is devoted to a detailed study of the subject. It discusses the various aspects of the subject, and the relationships between them. The author also discusses the various theories and models that have been developed in the field, and the evidence in support of them.

The third part of the book is devoted to a study of the various applications of the subject. It discusses the various ways in which the subject has been applied in practice, and the results of these applications. The author also discusses the various problems that have arisen in the course of these applications, and the ways in which they have been solved.

The fourth part of the book is devoted to a study of the various future developments of the subject. It discusses the various areas in which the subject is likely to be developed in the future, and the ways in which these developments can be encouraged.

The fifth part of the book is devoted to a study of the various conclusions that can be drawn from the study. It discusses the various findings of the study, and the ways in which they can be used to inform practice and policy.

settled on the Hunton farm on the east side of the river, and it was while living there that he found the body of Maj. Thomas Fish, who froze to death Dec. 20, 1781. He finally settled on the lot where Maj. Fish had made his improvement, and which to this day is called Fish Meadow. His religious zeal was somewhat erratic and the phraseology of his prayers was amazing. One was, that the Lord would "send his spirit into the wilderness where man never was and never would be." It is presumed that he searched for this spot when in old age he bought a large tract of land in Franklin Plantation at a nominal price and attempted to settle himself and all his children there, with farms adjoining. He built and died in the Mason house, next north of the Second Baptist Church, and is buried in the yard nearby. He had eight children and among them were Daniel; John, b. 1796; and Zebedee, b. 1787; the last of whom died at the expense of public charity. J. D. Thompson, when one of the Overseers of the Poor, of this town, removed Zebedee from Readfield to this town, and during the journey, Zebedee said to Mr. Thompson: "Never's up to Tumbledown Dick, was ye? Great stones up there; go rouse-e-ti-rouse from bottom th' top." He, too, was religious and his zeal was as honest as his language was noticeable. In one of his prayers, given in school-house No. 4, while leading the meeting, he said: "O, Lord, Thou knowest that if we don't stick to Thee we're gone for't, make us to be Thy children, 'bounding, steadfast and 'movable in the grace of the Lord."

DELANO, ZEBEDEE, JR. (2d Gen.)

B. 1767; m. Abigail Cottle and settled on what was the old town farm, the buildings of which are now burned. He became a Baptist minister and moved to Lebanon, Me.

DELANO, EBENEZER. (2d Gen.)

B. 1771; m. Nancy Titus in 1793, and settled on the farm now owned by J. M. Shackley in the extreme westerly part of this town.

The first part of the history is a general account of the state of the country at the beginning of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the various provinces and the different customs and laws which prevailed in each of them. It also mentions the names of the several kings who reigned in the first century of the reign, and the principal events which happened in their reigns. The second part of the history is a more particular account of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the several wars which he fought, and the different expeditions which he made into France, Normandy, and Ireland. It also mentions the names of the several nobles and knights who were distinguished in his reign, and the principal events which happened in his reign. The third part of the history is a general account of the state of the country at the beginning of the reign of King Henry the Second. It describes the various provinces and the different customs and laws which prevailed in each of them. It also mentions the names of the several kings who reigned in the second century of the reign, and the principal events which happened in their reigns. The fourth part of the history is a more particular account of the reign of King Henry the Second. It describes the several wars which he fought, and the different expeditions which he made into France, Normandy, and Ireland. It also mentions the names of the several nobles and knights who were distinguished in his reign, and the principal events which happened in his reign.

The fifth part of the history is a general account of the state of the country at the beginning of the reign of King Richard the First. It describes the various provinces and the different customs and laws which prevailed in each of them. It also mentions the names of the several kings who reigned in the third century of the reign, and the principal events which happened in their reigns. FISH, THOMAS, MAJ.

D. Dec. 20, 1781; of Oxford, Worcester County, Mass.; m. Naomi Mixer of Sutton, June 25, 1767. There is an account of one child, Ruth, b. Dec. 5, 1768, who married, lived and died in Mass. Although this record is simple and short, yet in it, there is a history of deeds accomplished and privations endured, that are closely connected with the birth of Livermore. He was in the Revolution as major of a regiment in the Continental Army and was one of the assistants of Dea. Livermore in lotting out the "First Division" of this township in September and October, 1772, and one of the appointed surveyors who completed the survey of the "Last Division." He was the trusted executive officer who personally attended to the orders of the Proprietors of this township, very few of whom ever saw or cared to see, their land in Livermore. He surveyed the course of the Androscoggin river in its course through Livermore and noted the position of the islands. He made an accurate survey of Long Pond and noted its position on the plan of this town and through his sole efforts the road from here to Winthrop was cleared and the bridge between Dexter and Wilson ponds, then in Pondtown or Winthrop, and since called Craig's Bridge, built, thus giving the early settlers direct communication with the Kennebec river. He was a man who always saw the humorous side of every privation, and endured hardships that would break down the constitution of any man not of an iron mould. He became the owner of lot 28 which includes "Fish Meadow," Nov. 6, 1773, and also part of lot 27, next south of No. 28. Here at the junction of the Fish Meadow and the old discontinued road leading to Isaac Livermore's, he built his log cabin, the cellar and foundation of which can even now plainly be seen. He lived alone, for his wife had died just before he came here with the intention of making a permanent home and his tragic death cast a gloom over the early settlement. He could make and mend shoes, and frequently visited Winthrop, where he was well known, especially to Miss Betsey Marrow, who was soon to be the mistress of his home, had not his courage in facing a tramp of sixteen miles through a piercing winter storm with a pack weighing twenty-five pounds strapped to his shoulders, caused his untimely death. The exact date of this event was made certain by the discovery of this entry, found in the record of deaths kept by the town clerk of Winthrop at that time: "Major Fish perished Dec. 20, 1781." It was upon one of these visits to Winthrop that he called at the house of Nathaniel Fairbanks and obtained half a side each of sole and upper leather and started for his home, distant sixteen miles, at 3 P.M., in the midst of a fierce north-east snowstorm. He crossed the Androscoggin at Wing's ferry, just below the rips, and opposite to where A. D. Edgecomb now lives, and from here there was a straight road direct to Dea. Livermore's house, but when within a half-mile of the Deacon's, blinded by the driving snow, he swerved to the east toward the Intervale, and at the foot of the hill within twenty rods of the road as now traveled, he yielded to the cold and exhausted nature gave way, but not until he had unslung his pack and hung it to a spruce limb; not till he had vainly tried to write a message on the trunk of a nearby tree, did he surrender to that, that was mightier than he; and he died as he had lived, facing all dangers, braving hardships and solitude, in the storm, in the night, and alone. At midnight, Dea. Livermore heard a sound in the storm like something in distress, and got up and listened, but nothing more being heard, he retired again and not until the second day after, when his departure from Winthrop was learned, was any search made and then by following his track in the snow, Jabez Delano found the body of Major Fish and with assistance carried it to Dea. Livermore's, where it was thawed, prepared for the coffin and then buried with military honors at Winthrop. No headstone was erected and in after years when his daughter wished to remove his remains to Massachusetts, no one could tell where he was laid, and there he is today; near his would-be bride and friends, and yet alone. His sword that he carried through the war of the Revolution was afterward used by Maj. William Livermore and from him it passed to Col. Thomas Chase and from him to Gilbert Hathaway, who gave it to his grandson, John Q. Thompson, and he carried it to Iowa where he died. J. D. Thompson told the writer that it was a short, curved sword, of good width, and that he frequently carried it when he was captain of one of the militia companies. An effort has been made to recover this relic and preserve it in the town where its history makes it an object of unusual interest. Maj. Fish, as one of the assistants in lotting out the "First Division," left Waltham Aug. 18, 1772, and arrived at "Liverton," as he named it, Aug. 30, via Bombay Hook, Fort Western and Winthrop. His second visit was made in 1773, when he left Oxford, April 26th, and reached here on the 17th of May, via Falmouth, New Gloucester, Auburn Lake and Sylvester. It being after sunset when they got into town, he lost his way and he and Dea. Livermore camped on what he called an island in Fish Meadow within a mile of their objective point and in the morning, recognizing their position, soon reached the Deacon's "Grand Camp." It was on this trip that they cleared a road from Auburn to Livermore. June 17th, he returned to Massachusetts, but was back to Liverton, the 23d of the following August. His fourth visit was made in 1774, when he left Massachusetts April 18th, and arrived via Pownalborough and Winthrop on the 4th of May. His fifth and last journey was in the year 1780, when he made his home with Dea. Livermore, until he had made his pitch and built the log house as before described. After his death Dea. Livermore took charge of his personal effects, which included the journal or diary from which part of these notes were made, but whether his real estate was administered upon, or sold for taxes, the latter of which is most probable, is, like his grave, unknown.

FULLER, JOHN.

B. 1744; d. 1829; m. Anna Toby, b. in Boston, 1744, O. S.; d. 1837. They were m. in 1768, in Sandwich, Mass., and moved from Barnstable to Winthrop in 1773, where he built the house still standing and occupied by Benj. Dorman. They are buried in Hillman's Cemetery and the granite stone that marks his grave is a symbol of his life, plain and honest. His boys urged him to remove to Livermore for on one of their exploring trips they had observed the rich loam of the "Intervale" and the undeveloped water power at Richmond's Mills; prevailing upon him to do so and with their assistance, he purchased in 1802, of Ebenezer Hinds, 2d, the lot and mill privilege at Richmond's Mills, where they erected a mill for the sawing of lumber, the carding of wool and the fulling of cloth that was in after years called "Fuller's Mill." The house, already built at the time of the purchase of the lot, stood just north of the stream and on the brow of the hill where the large house of F. S. Richmond was burned a few years ago. Among the family records now in the possession of his grandson, Reuben E. Fuller, is an old deed, executed in 1771 and recorded in 1793, dating the warrantee from William Bradford in 1661, to the Colony of New Plymouth and from them to John Fuller, of a tract of land in Winthrop.

The first of these is the fact that the medical profession has been largely unorganized and uncoordinated in its efforts to improve the public health.

The second is the fact that the medical profession has been largely unorganized and uncoordinated in its efforts to improve the public health.

CONCLUSION

The medical profession has a duty to perform in the public health. It is a duty that is not only to the individual patient but to the community as a whole.

FULLER, CHARLES W.

B. 1821; d. 1902; m. Emma N. Dunn, b. 1838; d. 1911, aged 73. They live on the old farm and have one daughter, Alice B., a graduate of Wellesley College.

FISHER, ELIJAH.

D. 1842, aged 83; m. Jerusha Keene; d. 1840, aged 76. He was a Revolutionary soldier and fought at the battle of Bunker Hill. He was a member of Washington's Body Guard, and it is remarkable that beginning with his service in the army and until the close of the war, he kept a journal of all the important events with which he was connected. The War Department at Washington, fortunately secured a copy of this record, for the original was burned in the fire which destroyed the buildings in 1913. The original house first stood about twenty rods to the West, near a large elm tree and on a road leading directly to the old fulling mill on Bog Brook, the dam and foundation of which can still be seen.

FISHER, STEPHEN.

D. 1833, aged 51; m. Anstrus Leavitt, b. 1798. On the bank of the stream which flows into Brettun's Pond, west-erly of the Milton Leavitt homestead, stood a building. Stephen Fisher took it down carefully, made a raft of its timbers and boards, floated it down to the pond bridge, and hauled it to the Bog brook, making it into a "Fulling Mill." The dam and foundation can still be seen on the northerly side of the Strickland Ferry road where it crosses this stream.

At this time he lived in the house mentioned in connection with Ebenezer Keith's first residence. A fact well authenticated by Salome and Sarah Fisher and also by others, is that Fisher had a little girl who wandered away from home, in the direction of the swamp between the J. O. Palmer place and Dailey's Mills. Diligent search was made, but nothing found except one little shoe and part of a torn garment. One other fact remembered by the same neighbors, was that another little girl of Fisher's choked to death by swallowing an acorn shell which lodged in her throat. It is known that they had a daughter, Sally S., b. 1807, who married Sewell Spencer, familiarly known as "Uncle Jack."

FERNALD, SAMUEL.

D. 1877, aged 88. 1st wife, Anna, d. 1847, aged 57. 2d, Maria Perley, b. 1810; d. 1887. His son, Lysander, d.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the success of any business and for the protection of the interests of all parties involved. The text also mentions the need for regular audits and the importance of having a clear system in place for handling financial data.

2. The second part of the document focuses on the role of management in ensuring the integrity of the financial reporting process. It highlights the responsibility of management to provide accurate and timely information to the board and to the public. The text also discusses the importance of having a strong internal control system and the need for management to be transparent and accountable for the company's financial performance.

3. The third part of the document discusses the importance of having a clear and concise set of financial reporting policies and procedures. It emphasizes that these policies should be designed to ensure the accuracy and reliability of the financial statements. The text also mentions the need for regular communication and training to ensure that all employees understand the importance of following these policies and procedures.

GIBBS, PELETIAH, DEA.

D. 1846, aged 89; m. Anna Littlefield, d. 1816, aged 60. 2d, Mrs. Achsah Barber, d. 1849, aged 69. He was a Revolutionary soldier and came from Milford, Mass., to Livermore in 1784, making his pitch or improvement on the farm now owned by E. H. Gibbs. We find by diligent search that it was the custom of the early settlers to find a suitable building spot, near living water, on which to make a clearing, and if the soil proved productive and the surroundings agreeable, to purchase of the owner the lot on which his pitch was located. Sometime, they abandoned the effort, and these clearings were called "Improvements." This was just what Mr. Gibbs did, only he exchanged "Improvements" with Billy Carver, who had made his pitch on the farm now owned by J. M. Hinds. Mr. Gibbs thought that the land where Carver had made his pitch and built a log cabin was better adapted for pasturage than the "Intervale" and yet, neither had a deed of the land he occupied which was owned by Dea. Livermore. We find several instances like this: One man made a clearing and then found that it was on the corner of four lots, consequently he abandoned the pitch; a road is located as passing through Othinal Pratt's "Improvement," etc. However, Oct. 14, 1785, Dea. Gibbs bought of Livermore Lot 33, now owned by J. M. Hinds, and the day before Livermore deeded to Billy Carver Lot 14, where E. H. Gibbs now lives. Dea. Gibbs gave the land for the Loney graveyard and requested that in it, his body be laid at rest, and there it is, although the tombstone stands in the Gibbs Cemetery.

NOC, NOX, KNOX.

Knox, Stacy D., lived on the farm owned and occupied by John Hyde as long as he lived in Livermore. His wife, Polly, d. 1859, aged 71, and is buried in the Goding yard at the north end of the town. It is supposed that he is buried there also, but no stone marks his grave.

It was the custom in the "old days" for farmers to take the salable products of their farms to Portland or Hallowell and there exchange them for such necessities as the family would need during the winter months. Mr. Knox left his home at two o'clock in the morning, on one of these trips, and when on the "Merrill" hill, in Turner, he saw the northern horizon lighted by what was evidently a burning building. The next night, upon his return, he found his buildings burned flat and his family at a neighbor's. He had sons, Richard and Daniel, and a daughter who married Sewell Dunn of Dixfield. Marcellus and Melvin Knox of Livermore Falls, were his grandsons.

The first part of the report deals with the general situation of the profession in the United States. It is noted that the number of physicians has increased steadily since 1900, and that the distribution of physicians is still uneven, with a concentration in the large cities and a shortage in the rural areas. The report also discusses the various branches of the profession, including general practice, surgery, and pediatrics, and notes the increasing specialization of physicians in these fields.

The second part of the report deals with the education and training of physicians. It is noted that the requirements for medical education have become more stringent in recent years, and that the length of the course of study has increased. The report also discusses the various methods of instruction, including lectures, clinical teaching, and the use of the hospital as a laboratory. It is noted that the standard of medical education has risen considerably since 1900, and that the graduates of the medical schools are better prepared to enter the profession.

The third part of the report deals with the economic situation of the profession. It is noted that the average income of physicians has increased since 1900, and that the cost of living has also risen. The report also discusses the various factors that influence the income of physicians, including the number of patients, the complexity of the cases, and the location of the practice.

which was held in the Norlands Church. The writer, with A. C. Pray and H. W. Briggs, sang, and I well remember how Mr. Herrick leaned over the pulpit and gazing on the face of Mrs. Kidder, who lacked but a few days of being 103 years old, said, "It seems as though the angels from Heaven, had smoothed the wrinkles from off her brow."

KEITH, EBENEZER.

D. 1845, aged 73; m. Bethia Bryant, d. 1855, aged 78. He came from Bridgewater, Mass., previous to 1800, and first lived in a house on the easterly side of the road, midway between Chase's Corner and the house of R. S. Timberlake. He soon settled and built himself a house on top of the hill, not far from the Amos Edes place, now owned by the Albert Sargent heirs. It was while living in the first mentioned house, that Mrs. Keith with a child in her arms, called on Mrs. Jonathan Morse, who lived on the Hamilton Martin or Adney Boothby farm. Mrs. Keith and Mrs. Morse, with a child in her arms also, were seated on or near a newly erected barn frame, which Mr. Morse had just completed, when suddenly a whirlwind, accompanied by a thunder cloud, leveled the frame, killing the babe and breaking the arm and leg of Mrs. Keith. Mrs. Martin Keith related these facts to the writer and said that she had seen the scars on leg and arm of the elder Mrs. Keith. Mrs. Morse was killed, but the babe, Anna L., was unhurt and m. Elias was born in 1825 and married Elvira I. Hayford. 2d, Eliza S. Drake. 3d, Hattie E. Keene.

LIVERMORE, SAMUEL.

Was of the 4th generation of those in the U. S. and died in 1773. He m. in 1726 Hannah Brown, the mother of "Elijah," the principal subject of this sketch. In 1765 he m. 2d, Mrs. Hannah Harrington, who died in 1765. In 1767 he m., 3d, Mrs. Joanna Felton, who died in 1767; and in 1770 he m. Mrs. Thankful Cutting, who died in 1772.

LIVERMORE, ELIJAH.

Like Abou Ben Adhem's, this name should lead all the rest, but for alphabetical reasons, I place it here. He was b. in Waltham, Mass., Mar. 4, 1730; and died in Livermore, Aug. 5, 1808. He m. Dinah Harrington, who died 1759. 2d, Hannah Clark, b. in Newton, Mass., 1740; died in Livermore, 1827.

He, in company with Elisha Harrington, was sent by the "Proprietors," as previously stated, on a tour of exploration to the Province of Maine in the fall of 1771. This was his first visit and the second was made in 1772, when with a party consisting of Ebenezer Waters, Ebenezer Learned, Richard Woodward, Thomas Fish and himself, he started from Waltham, Aug. 18th, and at Boston they embarked on the sloop "Fenix" and sailed, via Merrymeeting Bay, Kennebec river, Pownalboro and Gardiner, where they landed, and thence by spotted trees to Winthrop and across Androscoggin Lake, through Dead river and into and down the Androscoggin as far as Dailey's Mills, when the township was outlined and the "First Division" lotted. His third visit was made in the spring of 1773, and whether he came to Falmouth by land or water does not appear, we only know that he and his "hired hands," with two pairs of oxen, a horse and other cattle were there the first of May and started for the new township, hauling a part of their goods and stores on a tote sled, but they evidently established a supply depot somewhere, for on the fourth day they returned and met a party consisting of Thomas Fish and his father-in-law, David Mixer, William Foster and Ebenezer Gleason, who left Oxford, Mass., April 26th, and arrived at Falmouth on the sloop "Sally," May the second. Joining forces, they advanced toward the township, clearing roads and fording streams too wide to bridge, via New Gloucester, across Little Androscoggin river, through Auburn and Sylvester, camping the 13th and 14th by "Twenty Mile" river, where they found the "trout large and plenty." On the 17th, Dea. Livermore and "his hands," with Mixer, hurried forward to plant corn and potatoes on his pitch, leaving the rest of the party to come more slowly. Upon their arrival on the 26th, the Deacon killed a fat calf, which greatly cheered the tired men and "with other good 'Necessaries,' made them in as good condition as Ever."

Dea. Livermore remained here this summer and it is quite probable throughout the following winter, for Thomas Fish found him, well at his camp May 7, 1774." "The dark aspect of affairs" between New England and Old England caused Dea. Livermore and others to abandon the settlement here and it was not until 1779 when the outcome of the Revolutionary War was evident, that the Deacon with his family made a permanent home on the well-known spot where he had his camp, where he built his house and where he died.

They came in April, via Kennebec river and Winthrop where his family remained until he had built a small house and raised a crop of corn and potatoes on his pitch, when they joined him and with brave hearts commenced the battle with the wilderness. Elijah Livermore, sometimes referred to as Lieutenant, a title he gained in the Massachusetts militia, or more often as Deacon, a position to which he was elected in the Congregational Church of Waltham, was a man of good, strong sense, possessing the faculty of foreseeing the outcome of any financial enterprise, and at one time owned 2,000 acres of land in town, acquiring nearly all of it by purchase at tax sales, and selling to the incoming settlers at a good profit. He was the first Representative from this township to the "Great and General Court," at Boston, and it has come down to us, that when the time came for his departure to occupy this position, he made the journey on horseback, wearing a cocked hat, shad-bellied waistcoat, ruffled shirt and knee-breeches. At the time of his death he owned 1,120 acres of land and left $10,000 in money.

He had a sister who married Mr. Phipps, the man who owned a part of what is now the towns of Jay and Canton, called then Phipps' Canada. Deacon Livermore gave his influence to the Methodist denomination and was instrumental in building the church at Livermore Center, giving the land on which it stands to be used for that purpose, otherwise to revert to his heirs. The house built by Dea. Livermore now owned by E. E. Putnam, was built about 1790, although the exact year cannot be ascertained. Zebedee Rose, Sr., who was a carpenter, worked on the house and an examination of its construction will convince any one that it did not go up like our modern balloon frames. The foundation is massive and firm, while the building is double-silled and the walls planked. He built four barns and in later years when one of these was repaired, an eighty-foot hewn sill was replaced with two forty-foot ones.

In 1787, Dea. Livermore owned the lot at the extreme northeast corner of what is now East Livermore and this lot is the very pinnacle of Moose Hill, so called, from the fact that in this year, Dea. Livermore shot a moose there, the meat of which he kept in an out-door cellar on the edge of his "Intervale," during the winter; this is evidence that the present house was not built at that period. The first town-meeting was held at the house of Dea. Livermore in 1795, so it is conclusive that this historic house was built between the years 1787 and 1795.

There is but one likeness of any of the family, and that, an oil painting of his daughter, Sarah, the grandmother of Mrs. W. S. Treat of Livermore Falls. He and his wife are buried at Hillman's Cemetery, in sight of those broad fields that he wrested from the wilderness and the home he made with his own hands. His monument is like his character, plain and modest; a simple slate stone.

LIVERMORE, ABIGAIL.

Of these:

B. 1758; d. 1817; m. Rev. Elisha Williams, son of a Congregational minister of East Hartford, Conn., a graduate of Yale College and the first schoolmaster in town. He was here in 1790 and during his residence was prominent in town and church affairs and in 1798 became pastor of the Baptist Church at Brunswick. They had eleven children and he died in Cambridge, Mass., in 1845.

LIVERMORE, WILLIAM.

B 1763; d. 1832; m. Mrs. Sarah Taylor Jones. He was not a resident of this town, but spent his boyhood in Boston, traded at Canton Point and afterwards at Hallowell and died in Louisiana. He had several children, none of whom settled in town.

LIVERMORE, ISAAC.

B. 1768; m. Elizabeth Kinney, d. 1823, aged 48. He, like his brother William, spent his boyhood in Boston and then traded in Hallowell, moving to Livermore about 1795, where he built a two-story house and set out a row of chestnut trees on Lot 26, next east of that where John Monroe settled and about 35 rods north of the David Bonny buildings that Isaac Hersey built, near "Cat Corner." Evidently, when he moved from Hallowell to Livermore, he brought with him many unsold goods, for he traded in a room, finished for that purpose, in the house that he built, from 1796 until 1805. This fact is proved from the books he kept, in which are many familiar names of men who are known to have lived in town, charged with receiving goods sold by him, at that time. The acknowledgment on many deeds and legal documents, still in existence, bear his signature as Justice of the Peace. When Isaac Hersey bought his farm, in the room used as a store, he found the account book, to which I refer, and the book is now in the possession of the widow of Herbert L. Hersey of Livermore Falls. He was greatly

CHAPTER I

The first part of the history of the United States is the history of the colonies. The colonies were first settled by Englishmen in 1607, and they grew in number and importance until the Revolution of 1776. The colonies were at first dependent on Great Britain, but they gradually became more independent, and finally they declared their independence in 1776.

CHAPTER II

The second part of the history of the United States is the history of the early years of the Republic. The Constitution was adopted in 1787, and the first President, George Washington, was inaugurated in 1789. The early years of the Republic were marked by the Jay Treaty of 1794 and the XYZ Affair of 1797.

CHAPTER III

The third part of the history of the United States is the history of the War of 1812. The war was fought between the United States and Great Britain from 1812 to 1815. The war was a result of the British blockade of the American coast and the American desire for territory. The war ended in a draw, but it established the United States as a major power in the world.

The fourth part of the history of the United States is the history of the antislavery movement. The antislavery movement began in the 1780s and grew in strength throughout the 19th century. It led to the passage of the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863 and the 13th Amendment to the Constitution in 1865. The antislavery movement was a major force in the development of the United States.

troubled with asthma and in 1825 sold his farm and moved to St. Joseph, Mo., where he died.

His children, born in Livermore, were: Hannah, b. 1797; d. 1836 (Boston). Granville P., b. 1798 (St. Joseph, Mo.). Eliza, b. 1801 (Boston). Elijah, b. 1804 (Mo.). Horatio G., b. 1807 (San Francisco, Cal.). Abigail W., b. 1809 (Boston). Alma L., b. 1812; d. 1841. Julia S., b. 1820 (Mo.).

LIVERMORE, SAMUEL.

B. 1778; d. 1823; m. Lura Chase, b. 1784; d. 1870. He was the Deacon's youngest son and lived at home until his marriage, when his father built for him the house formerly owned and occupied by Lewis Leavitt and gave him the lot on which it stood. He was elected in 1813 to the Great and General Court and was considered to be a genial, comfortable, easy-going man, not very keen in a trade as was evidenced by the gradual disappearance of his property. There used to be a road leading directly north from the Livermore place, to Richmond's Mills, and on this road were three houses, in one of which Samuel died. After his death this house was removed and is now a part of that in which Ernest R. Merrill resides.

Children: Betsey, d. 1822, aged 18. Emery, b. 1809; m. Elizabeth Douglass (St. Joseph, Mo.). Lura, b. 1815; m. Levi B. Young (E. Livermore).

Betsey, evidently at the time of her decease, was someone's fiancée, for on her tombstone are these lines: "This memorial insignæ is erected by a disconsolate friend, Simeon Foss, in affectionate remembrance of Miss Betsey Livermore, who departed this life July 23, 1822, aged 18 years, 9 months and 19 days, of a consumption the current of which she stem'd 20 weeks, then calmly laid down life for a happy immortality."

LIVERMORE, AMOS.

B. 1764; d. 1826; m. Hannah Sanderson, b. 1771. They moved to Livermore in 1796 and he built the house known as the Ryerson house, which was burned in 1824. His 2d wife was Eunice Luce and his 3d was Phebe Luce, who died in 1829, aged 61. She was a sister to the 2d wife. Children: Lucy, b. 1796. Thomas, b. 1798. Hannah, b. 1800. Eliza, b. 1803. Amos Henry, b. 1806; d. 1840. Grace S., b. 1809. Mary Anna Dana, b. 1811. Adaline M. Phebe, d. 1841, aged 34. Henry, d. 1840, aged 44. Accounts are so conflicting as to his children, some giving 8, some 10 and some 11. We are sure of three only: Phebe, Henry and Eunice, who m. Richard Merrill, d. 1861, aged 67, and she d. 1883, aged 81.

LIVERMORE, NATHANIEL.

B. 1713; d. 1783; m. Martha White in 1751. He built the house on the place where Dea. Sanders lived, later owned by J. Harris Stevens, and now the property of Cyril W. Jackson. Every nail and spike used in building this house, is hand made. Among his children were Tabitha, b. 1757; m. Lieut. Samuel Benjamin in 1782. Lydia, b. 1763; m. Ephraim Child in 1787. Amos, b. 1764; m. Hannah Sanderson in 1795. I have heard it stated that Amos and Nathaniel were distant cousins of Elijah Livermore.

LEARNED, DAVID, GEN.

D. 1811, aged 44; m. Mary Hurd, d. 1863, aged 97. He came from Oxford, Mass., in 1790, and settled on Lot 50, which included the farms of Israel Washburn and Otis Pray. He was the first trader in town and his store stood south of the Norlands Church, near the site of Otis Pray's buildings. In 1800 he sold goods to the amount of $500, and also built a sawmill at the outlet of Bartlett's Pond. He sold the south half of his lot to Bartholomew Woodbury of Sutton, Mass., which included the Pray farm, and the remainder to Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, which is the Israel Washburn homestead, and built, just over the line, on Lot 51, a new house, now known as the W. P. Washburn place or "Oxford House." When the County of Oxford was formed in 1805, Gen.

Learned christened it in honor of his native town. He was the first Sheriff of the County and as such according to the old law, collected the County tax, and absconded. Returning home from New Orleans in 1844, he died on shipboard and was buried at sea. The ship's captain wrote a letter to Mrs. Learned, giving the circumstances of Learned's death and enclosed a lock of his hair and his gold band ring. The Masons, of Oriental Star Lodge, to which Learned belonged, assisted the widow Learned in many ways, and Capt. Otis Pray, a near neighbor, and also a member of the Lodge, preserved this letter, and it was at the home of Pray that I saw the lock of hair and ring and read the letter.

Children: Maria, m. Publius R. R. Pray (Miss.). Samuel. When last seen by any of his family was in Miss. He was a perpetual motion genius, and of a roving character. Eliza. She was unmarried and her brother, Charles D., bought her a home at North Livermore. She died in 1870, aged 65.

LEARNED, CHARLES D.

M. Mary Hamlin, b. 1805; d. 1841. He was a lawyer in Miss. and died at the age of 86. Children: Mary Maria Eliza, b. 1830; m. Ezekiel Bowles (N. H.). Laurinda Augusta Hamlin, b. 1832; m. Simeon H. Edson. Charles D. Sophronia. Vestie Ann. The last three children died in infancy at Isaac Hamlin's in Livermore.

LAURINDA, A. H.

M. Simeon H. Edson and they had four children. Emma Eliza, b. 1851; m. Jacob Hoch (R. I.). Clara C., b. 1853; m. Horatio Burgess, d. 1890, aged 73. 2d, George Tarr (Livermore Falls). 3d, Joseph H. Thing, b. 1844; d. 1916. Charles A., b. 1855; m. Lillie Johnson (Vt.). Julius H., b. 1857; m. Jeanette Sullivan (Vt.).

CLARA C., who m. Horatio Burgess, an architect, had two children. Millie A. Burgess, b. 1876, and George Bertram Burgess, b. 1878.

LEAVITT, BRANCH.

Of Turner; m. Lucy Pratt and their children were: James Madison. Mercy M. Lewis and Rebecca B.

Of these:

LEAVITT, JAMES MADISON.

Will be remembered as the founder of Leavitt Institute in the town of Turner, and his gift of $10,000 for that purpose is a monument to his interest in the cause of education. His home was in New York where, after having retired from active business, he lived until his death.

LEAVITT, LEWIS.

B. 1834; d. 1904; m. Persis W. Berry, d. 1860, aged 24. 2d, Betsey J. Bisbee, b. 1838; d. 1903. He moved to Livermore in 1866 and was an extensive farmer and dealer in cattle. He lived at Hillman's Ferry on the farm formerly owned by Dea. Charles Barrell.

Children by 1st wife:

ABBY, b. 1859; m. Asa M. Gilman (Portland).

FRED A., b. 1860; m. Ada E. Barker; d. 1909. 2d, Annie Louise Fitts, b. 1871.

He owns the old place, the buildings on which, and a large stock of cattle, were consumed by a fire caused by lightning in 1922. They were rebuilt and he and his wife make it their home in the summer time, spending the winters in California.

LEAVITT, ADONIRAM JUDSON. (2d wife's child)

B. 1877; m. Mary H. Wallace. They live in California.

LOVEWELL, JOSEPH.

B. 1729; d. 1801; of Western, Mass.; m. Hannah Warren, b. 1741, d. 1782. 2d, Mrs. Ruth Child Walker, d. 1809. Among their ten children were: Isaac, b. 1762. Daniel, b. 1770. Elizabeth, b. 1774; m. Peter Goding, Jr. Hannah, b. 1776; m. Spencer Goding. Deliverance, b. 1782; m. William Cooper.

Of these: (2d Gen.)

LOVEWELL, ISAAC.

B. 1762; d. 1835; m. Lucy Harrington, b. 1752; d. 1807. 2d, Mrs. Lucy Merrill, d. 1856, aged 84.

Children: 1st wife (3d Gen.) Justis, b. 1788; d. 1802. Vici, b. 1790; d. 1794. Isaac, b. 1793; d. 1803. Lucy, d. 1794. No children, 2d wife.

Mr. Lovewell came to Livermore from Western, Mass., about 1790, and settled on the farm now owned by C. G. Thompson, on Waters Hill. The old two-story house with long sheds and barns stood opposite and on the westerly side of the road from the present buildings. In those days it was reckoned as a great apple farm and supported a cider mill, in fact it was made to support anything that would bring to its owner a dollar. Mr. Lovewell was quite deaf and many amusing stories are told caused by this infirmity. His second wife was from the town of Poland and had one son, Samuel Merrill, d. 1872, aged 72; m. Ruth N. Fuller, b. 1800, d. 1845, who inherited the farm and whose children were: Lucy Ann, d. 1881, aged 54. Sarah J., m. Samuel Robinson. Louisa, m. J. Brown (Mass.). Ruth M., m. A. Snell (Mass.). Dana P., m. Nellie Gammon (Mass.).

A sister of Samuel Merrill, Salome, married Loami Robinson, and another, Ann, married Mahew Chase.

LOVEWELL, DANIEL. (2d Gen.)

B. 1770; d. 1803; m. Nancy Jackson, b. 1774; d. 1861. She married in 1805, Stephen Webster of Mass. Daniel is buried in the Fuller yard on Waters Hill. He settled and built a house about half way from Bartlett's Corner to the outlet of Bartlett's Pond on the westerly side of the road.

Children: (3d Gen.) Amasa and Luther, twins, b. 1796. Harriett Webster, drowned in Bartlett's Pond, aged 6. Hannah J., b. 1803; d. 1885 in (Mass.).

Of these:

LEAVITT, STEPHEN, d. 1895, aged 90; m. Sally Ellis, d. 1892, aged 87.

He followed the sea for eleven years, ten of which he was first mate of the vessel; and on one voyage, upon the death of the captain, he navigated the ship from the west coast of South America, around Cape Horn home. This gave him the title of captain, by which he was familiarly known for the rest of his life, which he spent in Livermore on the farm at the head of Brettun's Mills Pond.

About 1883 he became financially embarrassed, but later on, when in better circumstances, he paid into the town treasury, $56 of abated taxes; this was a sample of his life and nothing more need be said. His children were Milton and Volney, and they were both soldiers in the Civil War, Volney losing his life in the battle of Cedar Creek, Va., in 1864, aged 22.

MUNRO—MUNROE—MONROE

At the battle of Worcester, Cromwell captured several regiments of Scotch soldiers, and among them were ROBERT, JOHN, HUGH and WILLIAM MUNRO. With other prisoners they were deported to Boston, consigned to Thomas Kemble. They all worked out their freedom and William, the progenitor of all the Monroes in New England, lies buried in Lincoln, Mass. He had a great-grandson, whose name was Benjamin, and he as a soldier, assisted in the capture of Port Royal, Nova Scotia, in 1710. For this service they received grants of land [see "The Beginning"]. He was one of the original proprietors of this township, but when the lots were drawn, he being dead, his son, Benj. Munro, Jr., being the heir, claimed his rights and drew Lots 39, 92, 102 and 33.

MUNRO, BENJ., JR. (2d Gen.)

Of Lincoln, Mass., had five sons, John, Abel, Abijah, Isaac and Micah, and to each of these with the exception of Micah, who was young, he gave a lot of land in Livermore.

MUNROE, JOHN. (3d Gen.)

B. 1764; d. 1856. As an example of the everlasting, multiplying links in the endless chain that wraps the earth in a network of connection, let me state that Grinfill Hanover, a Spaniard, married an English lady by the name of Polly Marcer; their only daughter, Anna, married a Scotchman by the name of Bisbee and their daughter married an Irishman by the name of Blake, and their daughter, Jerusha, who married John Keene, of Turner, was the mother of Mary Bisbee Keene, b. 1767; d. 1861, who married John Munroe. He was in the Revolutionary service on board a privateer, and in 1790 came from Boston in a sloop as far as Falmouth and then walked to Livermore. He told his children that when he reached Livermore, only a King's shilling was in his purse. His lot, No. 39, was just east of Abel's and he built a log house near a spring of water in the orchard, northeast of the present buildings, which were erected in 1801.

Children: (4th Gen.) Mary, b. 1793; d. 1820. Sally, b. 1795; m. Edward Keene (Sumner). Hannah, b. 1798; d. 1893; m. Alfred Swift (Wayne). Luda, b. 1800; d. 1845; m. Rev. Caleb Fuller (Wayne). John, b. 1803; d. 1873; m. Clarinda M. Thompson. Allen, b. 1805; d. 1892; m. Mary

The first part of the history is a general account of the state of the country at the beginning of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the condition of the kingdom, the state of the church, and the character of the people. It also mentions the various wars and conquests which took place during this period.

THE REIGN OF KING HENRY THE FIRST

The reign of King Henry the First was a period of great importance in the history of England. It was a time when the kingdom was united under a single monarch, and when the laws and customs of the country were firmly established.

THE REIGN OF KING RICHARD THE FIRST

The reign of King Richard the First was a period of great glory and adventure. It was a time when the English king was at the head of a powerful army, and when he was engaged in a series of wars and conquests which extended his empire to the very borders of the East. It was also a time when the English people were united in their loyalty to their king, and when they were proud to follow him to the ends of the earth.

THE REIGN OF KING JOHN

The reign of King John was a period of great misfortune and disaster for England. It was a time when the king was weak and unworthy, and when he was unable to maintain the empire which his predecessors had built up. It was also a time when the English people were divided and dissatisfied, and when they were ready to rebel against their king.

Ann Perley (Milo). Abijah, b. 1808; d. 1880 (Richmond, Va.).

Of these:

MONROE, JOHN, JR.

M. Clarinda M. Thompson; b. 1809; d. 1893 and lived on the old place until 1867, when he sold the farm, and bought the Elder Ransom Norton place at North Livermore. Children: (5th Gen.)

LIEUT. CHARLES FRED MONROE.

JOHN PITT MONROE.

B. 1848; d. 1862.

IRA THOMPSON MONROE.

B. 1852; m. Ida C. Leach, b. 1856. They continue to live on the Norton farm at North Livermore and he is the author of these notes and records, collected and compiled during a period of twenty years. He was Deputy Sheriff for seven years; Supt. of Schools, four years; and Moderator at the annual March meetings for 28 years.

MONROE, ABIJAH. (4th Gen.)

Emigrated to Richmond, Va., in 1837, and m. a widow with three sons, all of whom were in the Confederate army. He being a Northern sympathizer, his property was confiscated except $500 in gold, which he buried in his garden.

MONROE, ABEL. (3d Gen.)

B. 1769; d. 1861; m. Martha Bixby of Keene, N. H. 2d, Salome P. Hinds, d. 1876, aged 75. He settled on Lot 48, just west of John's and adjoining Sanders or Bartlett's Corner, where he built a house but later erected the buildings on top of the hill, now owned by Mrs. Dana H. Richmond. Not far from the northeast corner of this farm, can be seen the stone fireplace that Nathan Bartlett built and used when he by night watched a coalpit, the charcoal of which he used on the forge in his blacksmith shop.

ABEL MONROE'S children by his 1st wife (4th Gen.) were:

Sally, d. 1879, aged 84; m. John Morse of Jay. Martha, d. 1872, aged 73; m. Isaac Strickland. Nathan, drowned, 1813, aged 10. Joseph Snelling, b. 1812; d. 1870; m. Abby S. Thompson (Abbot). Isaac, m. Jane Kincaid. Mary, d. unmarried. Lucy, m. Isaac N. Bonney. Abel, d. 1818; infant. Julia, m. Elias Aldrich.

2d wife's children: Ann, d. 1864, aged 31; m. Levi Cole (Mass.). George, b. 1835; d. 1915; m. Fannie B. Bray, d. 1922. Abby, b. 1842; d. 1927; m. Andrew Faxon, d. 1877, aged 32 (Mass.). They had four children, only two of whom are now living.

MONROE, ISAAC. Of these: (4th Gen.)

Who m. Jane Kincaid, went south and was engaged in the slave trade; has not been heard from since the Civil War. They had three children, one of whom, Abel, b. 1823; m. Margaret Mayo, and lived at Paris Hill.

MONROE, MICAH. (3d Gen.)

As a boy lived with his brother, Abel; was kicked by a horse and died.

MONROE, GEORGE.

B. 1835; d. 1915; m. Fannie B. Bray, d. 1922. He went to California in 1859, returning to Livermore in 1868. For several years he had charge of a repair station, for the Overland Stage Co., on the summit of the Sierra Nevada Range. Later on, he made two trips to California and Nevada, but returned to his native town, and lived at Brettun's Mills.

MUNROE, ABIJAH.

B. 1755; d. 1823, one of the four brothers who were given lots by their father, Benjamin, and who married a daughter of Benj. Park, who at one time lived on what we call the Pullen place. Abijah's lot was No. 47 and is the south-east part of Bartlett's Corner. The house stood on the east side of the road, about half way between Bartlett's Corner and where the present house stands. It was called a tavern and maintained as such by Abijah as long as he lived. In 1833 it was taken down and moved to the "Intervale," and is a part of the house now owned by Myron A. Eames.

They had no children and are buried in the yard near Robert H. Boothby's. Rev. Paul Coffin in his diary of Aug. 30, 1798, speaks of stopping with him and adds that Munro and his wife were "sensible and agreeable." No doubt that Coffin esteemed them such, for they joined him in criticising the Baptists which, at that time, were becoming the most numerous and powerful religious society in town. Abijah and his brothers, John and Abel, were strong Methodists and the writer well remembers hearing Uncle Abel "Exhort," after the regular sermon in the old church at Livermore Center.

MONROE, ISAAC. (3d Gen.)

Was given the lot now owned by F. A. Billington, on Jug Hill, East Livermore, which he sold and for a short time traded in the old Nathan Bartlett house, at Bartlett's Corner. He returned to Massachusetts where many of his descendants reside.

MERRILL, JOSEPH. (1st Gen.)

B. 1750; d. 1820; m. Fanny Moon, an Indian maiden. She and her only child died, and he m. Eunice ———, b. 1755; d. 1813. 3d wife, Patty Strickland, a distant cousin of Maj. Isaac Strickland. Joseph first appeared one fall driving cattle past Dea. Livermore's up to the "Great

CHAPTER I

The first part of the history of the world is the history of the creation of the world. It is a story of the beginning of all things, of the origin of life and of the development of the human race. It is a story of the power of God and of the love of man.

The second part of the history of the world is the history of the fall of man. It is a story of the disobedience of Adam and Eve, of the entrance of sin into the world, and of the consequent suffering and death of all men.

The third part of the history of the world is the history of the redemption of man. It is a story of the sacrifice of Jesus Christ, of the forgiveness of sins, and of the promise of eternal life to all who believe in Him.

The fourth part of the history of the world is the history of the consummation of all things. It is a story of the final judgment, of the resurrection of the dead, and of the establishment of the new heaven and the new earth.

Meadows," or Phipps' Canada, to winter; and the Dea. bantered him to purchase the lot next north of his, but Joseph, after looking at the land, declined, saying, "There isn't enough stone on it, to fence the land;" but on his return in the spring, a trade was made and he settled on the road spoken of in relation to Samuel Livermore, and built a house, the cellar of which can still be seen.

TO THE HONORABLE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES
THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
540 EAST CANTON STREET
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60605

Dear Sirs:
I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th inst. regarding the proposed donation of the book "The Chemistry of the Carbonium Ion" by R. D. C. Brinkley, to the University of Chicago. I am pleased to inform you that the Board of Trustees has approved the donation of this book to the Department of Chemistry, University of Chicago.

The book "The Chemistry of the Carbonium Ion" by R. D. C. Brinkley, is a valuable contribution to the field of organic chemistry. It is a comprehensive treatment of the subject and is highly recommended for the library of the Department of Chemistry, University of Chicago.

I am sure that the book will be of great value to the faculty and students of the Department of Chemistry, University of Chicago. I am sure that the book will be of great value to the faculty and students of the Department of Chemistry, University of Chicago.

PIERPONT, ROBERT DE LA.

A Frenchman, married Dea. Livermore's sister, and resided in Roxbury, Mass. They had no children and Dea. Livermore's daughter, Sarah, frequently made extended visits with them. They adopted a boy by the name of John Murdock, who was about Sarah's age. Mr. Pierpont said to John Murdock, "If you will change your name to Pierpont and marry Sarah, I will give all my property to you." John was wise, and he accepted the proposition.

John realized that he bore a cumbersome name and he, for short, cut it to plain Robert Pierpont. He came to Livermore in 1805 and as Dea. Livermore was getting along in years, he resigned his active labors, and his real estate passed to Pierpont.

CHAPTER I

The first part of the history of the world is the history of the human race. It is a story of progress and struggle, of triumph and defeat. It is a story of the human mind, of its power and its limitations. It is a story of the human heart, of its joys and its sorrows. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

The second part of the history of the world is the history of the human mind. It is a story of discovery and invention, of knowledge and wisdom. It is a story of the human intellect, of its power and its limitations. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

The third part of the history of the world is the history of the human heart. It is a story of love and compassion, of kindness and generosity. It is a story of the human emotions, of their power and their limitations. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

The fourth part of the history of the world is the history of the human spirit. It is a story of faith and hope, of courage and determination. It is a story of the human soul, of its power and its limitations. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

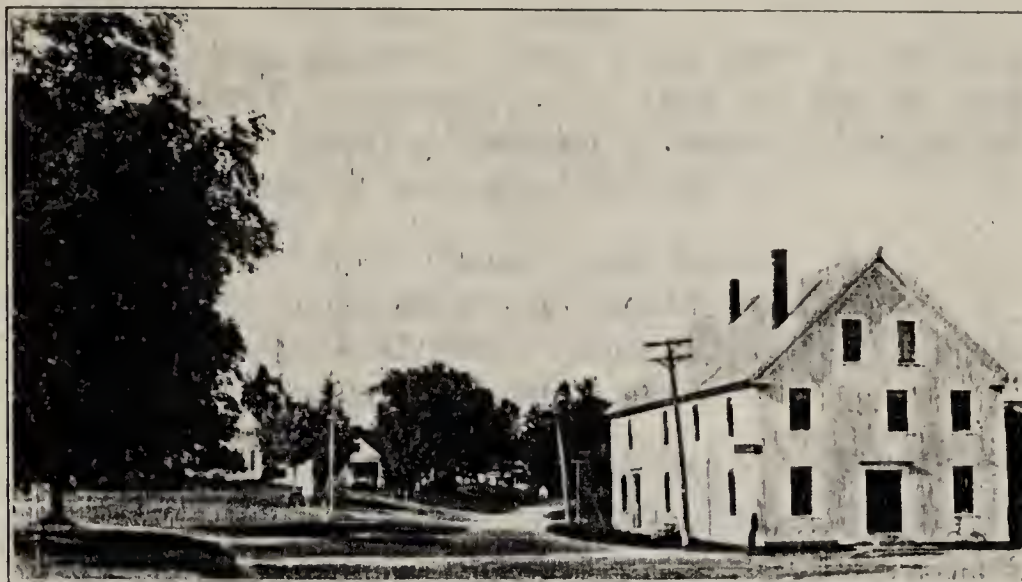

The fifth part of the history of the world is the history of the human race. It is a story of progress and struggle, of triumph and defeat. It is a story of the human mind, of its power and its limitations. It is a story of the human heart, of its joys and its sorrows. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

The sixth part of the history of the world is the history of the human mind. It is a story of discovery and invention, of knowledge and wisdom. It is a story of the human intellect, of its power and its limitations. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

The seventh part of the history of the world is the history of the human heart. It is a story of love and compassion, of kindness and generosity. It is a story of the human emotions, of their power and their limitations. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

The eighth part of the history of the world is the history of the human spirit. It is a story of faith and hope, of courage and determination. It is a story of the human soul, of its power and its limitations. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

The ninth part of the history of the world is the history of the human race. It is a story of progress and struggle, of triumph and defeat. It is a story of the human mind, of its power and its limitations. It is a story of the human heart, of its joys and its sorrows. It is a story of the human spirit, of its hopes and its dreams. It is a story of the human race, of its past and its future.

The second generation of Richmonds were among the early settlers of Livermore, and Palmer, Henry and Fred S. were mill men and did a large business at what is known as Richmond's Mills. Previous to 1860, they manufactured matches of the old bunch type. Later they were engaged in making boxes, turned from seasoned white birch, but the saw mill part was never changed or discontinued except to install a circular in place of the famous up and down saw with its long walking beam connected with a wooden under-shot water-wheel. A fire destroyed this plant several years ago. Fred S. managed large mills for the manufacture of boxes at Livermore Falls and James E. became a skillful mechanic in the machine department of the I. P. Co. at Chisholm, Me. His home is at Livermore Center.

He preached the Methodist doctrine in Jay for a year, but his religious convictions were looked upon with amazement, particularly when exhorting. At one time he held a prayer-meeting at his house and Dea. Thompson and Ebenezer Pitts, with their wives, attended. During the services the Elder in illustrating the awful power of the Lord, made use of these words:

"Thunder and lightning, Heavens and earthquakes," when Mr. Pitts, arising, said: "Well, well, Elder, you cut on great; wife, get your things, we'll go home." But Dea. Thompson, being more lenient, remained. Elder Stevens was on board a privateer in the Revolution and when he was an old man, Lewis M. Wing, then a boy, saw him sitting on the sill of his cider mill and under the sill were two flat stones that he got from the brook in front of his house and Stevens said, "I have got some gravestones, if I ever die to use them." These same stones, engraved by his own hand, except the final date, are erected at his grave and on them he chiseled, "A soldier of Washington."

CHAPTER I. THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

SECTION I. THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA

The discovery of America by Christopher Columbus in 1492 is one of the most important events in the history of the world. It opened up a new world of discovery and led to the development of a new civilization. Columbus's voyage was the first of many that would follow, as other explorers sought to reach the newly discovered continent. The discovery of America led to the establishment of colonies and the eventual formation of the United States.

The early history of the United States is a story of exploration, discovery, and the struggle for independence. The first European settlers arrived in North America in the late 15th and early 16th centuries. They established colonies and began to build a new society. The struggle for independence from Great Britain began in the 17th century and culminated in the American Revolution in the 18th century. The United States emerged as a new and powerful nation.

The United States has a long and rich history. It has been a land of opportunity and a land of freedom. It has been a land where people have come from all over the world to seek a better life. The United States has played a leading role in the world and has been a source of inspiration for people everywhere. The history of the United States is a story of progress and achievement.

TO THE HONORABLE CHIEF OF BUREAU OF MINERAL INVESTIGATION
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DEAR SIR:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th inst. and in reply to inform you that the same has been forwarded to the proper authorities for their consideration.

Very respectfully,
[Signature]

SAUNDERS, WILLIAM, DEA.

D. 1864, aged 84; m. Sally Safford, d. 1874, aged 89. He was born and learned the trade of a blacksmith in England, and as such, worked at his trade in a shop that stood on the west side of the road at Gibbs Mills, just north of the mill stream. In 1811 this shop was occupied by Stacy, who preceded him in the blacksmith trade. His adopted daughter, Rhoda Castle, m. Alonzo Sylvester, d. 1838, aged 27. He was a blacksmith also, and in company with Saunders, while nailing a shoe on to Charles Wyer's horse, during a thunder-shower, was instantly killed and Deacon Saunders prostrated by a bolt of lightning, while the horse was unharmed.

Children of Sylvester: Marcia, b. 1853; d. 1853 (Canton). Alonzo, b. 1838; m. Sarah Stanwood (Mass.).

B. 1765; d. 1857; m. Sally ———, d. 1799, aged 31. 2d, Mrs. Polly Chase, d. 1828, aged 58.

Col. Stone built what was for many years known as Stone's Tavern at North Livermore. It was remodeled into a Methodist Church in 1871 and is now the fine home of J. G. Coolidge. The old tavern with its spacious outbuildings was the stopping place of the stage that ran from Farmington to Portland. It had a rather small hall with one corner enclosed for a wine room, and the Baptist Church members and other good people allowed their children to attend a ball once a year in this old-fashioned tavern.

The writer asked his mother what they had for music, and she replied, "Nigger Pete and his fiddle."

Children: 1st wife, Polly, m. Ephraim Pray (Livermore Falls). Dwight (Mass.). John, m. Ann Orill Coolidge; she married 2d, Sewell Cram of Wilton.

SOPER, CYRUS.

D. 1891; b. 1816; m. Ann E. Hinds, b. 1818. He was a prominent townsman and good farmer.

Their children were: Flora M., b. 1843; d. 1856. Anna H., b. 1857; d. 1859. Hannibal. Fred.

STRICKLAND, HASTINGS, REV.

B. 1768; d. 1829; m. Sarah Perley, b. 1774; d. 1842. He lived on what we call the Job Chase farm, about thirty rods east of the present buildings, where the foundation of the house and barn can still be seen.

His children were: John, b. 1774; d. 1867. Isaac, b. 1797; d. 1886. Samuel P., b. 1801. Hastings, b. 1803; m. Clarinda Brettun, d. 1889 (Bangor). Lee, b. 1806, d. 1873.

Of these: (2d Gen.)

STRICKLAND, JOHN, CAPT.

M. Julia A. Sawin, d. 1889, aged 86. He lived on what we call the Edward Pratt farm, on the Strickland Ferry road, removing to the residence occupied by his son, George Byron, at Brettun's Mills.

Children: (3d Gen.) Lysander, m. Susan S. Brettun, b. 1829; d. 1893 (Bangor). Lyman (Houlton). Elizabeth S., d. 1879, aged 39. Josephine S., d. 1925; m. ———— Pierce. Annie Maria, b. 1832; d. 1888; m. G. F. Chase. George Byron, b. 1842; d. 1923. He is so closely connected with Brettun's Mills and its business interests, that his good deeds and kindly interest toward his neighbors, will never be forgotten.

STRICKLAND, ISAAC, MAJOR.

D. 1886, aged 89; m. Martha Monroe, d. 1872, aged 73. He and his brothers, Hastings, were both in the "Aroostook War." The Major told the writer that after they got back to Augusta, the officers all made themselves heroes. It was here that the Major smoked his first cigar with direful result, and never again did he hanker for the weed. He lived on the Sam. Boothby farm near Bartlett's Corner, when he was married, but soon removed to Brettun's Mills, where he lived in several places. He kept the "Tavern" for many years and its hall was used for balls, levees, town meetings, court trials, shows and religious meetings. Children: (3d Gen.)

FRANCES, m. ——— Woodman. They owned a plantation near Vicksburg, Miss., and Gen. Grant's famous canal, made to isolate the city, was dug through this property; this fact and for the reason that so many soldiers were buried in the soil, induced them to sell and remove elsewhere.

RUTH ANN, d. 1899, aged 72; m. William Bray, and their children were: William E., b. 1849; d. 1854; and Fannie B., d. 1922; m. George Monroe. 2d, C. D. Fuller.

I have been told that the W. I. Timberlake place was the original lot and farm, although my informant did not bear this name. It is evident that the elder James Timberlake was the ancestor of this large family, one branch of which descended to Nathan Timberlake who died in 1910 and who married Adelia Millett. Reliable persons have also told me, that the Nathan Timberlake farm was the original home of the elder James and from the fact that he and his wife are buried in the North Turner Bridge Cemetery, and his son, James the 2d, and his wife are buried in the Timberlake Cemetery, it would appear that the Nathan Timberlake farm was the original lot and the W. I. Timberlake farm was the home of James the 2d. James the 1st had a school tax of $1.41 assessed against him in 1803, a ministerial tax of 50 cents and a road tax of $3.13, and the town records show that he lived in the same School District as did Hastings Stricklands, Elijah Fisher and Nathaniel Perley.

TIMBERLAKE, NATHAN.

WASHBURN, ISRAEL L.

B. 1784; d. 1876; m. Martha Benjamin, b. 1792; d. 1861. The history of this remarkable family deserves more than a passing notice, for it is closely associated with the government of our State and nation. It is entitled to more space than I can allow, but for a complete record, reference can be had to "Genealogical Notes of the Washburn Family," compiled by Mrs. Julia Chase Washburn of Livermore. The family was of English descent and the first representative

MEMORANDUM

TO THE PRESIDENT AND THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES
FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY
SUBJECT: REPORT ON THE PROGRESS OF THE RESEARCH
DURING THE YEAR 1910

The following report contains a summary of the work done in the Department of Chemistry during the year 1910. It is divided into two parts, the first of which deals with the general progress of the department and the second with the results of the research work.

GENERAL PROGRESS

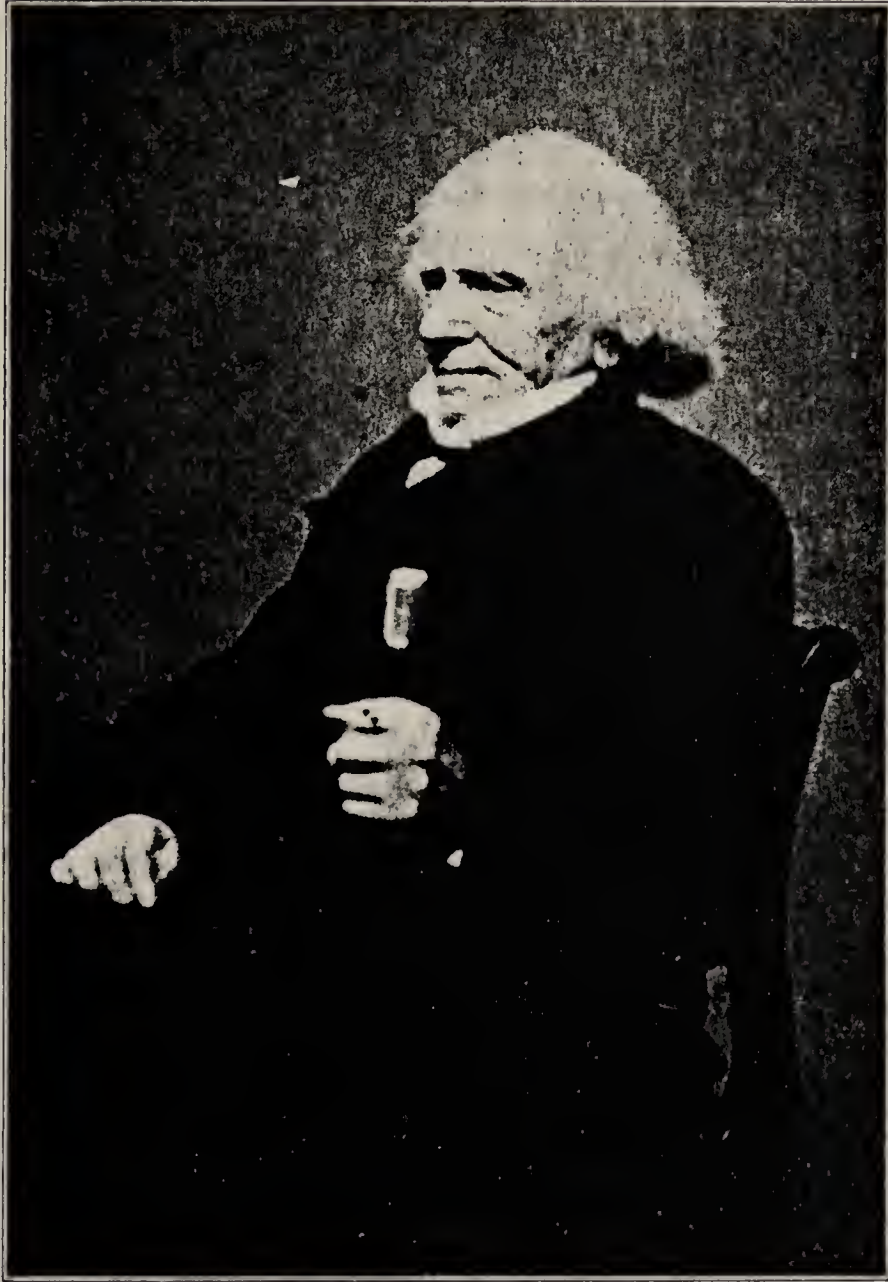

The Department of Chemistry has during the year 1910 been fortunate in receiving several new appointments, which have added to the strength of the department.

RESEARCH RESULTS

The research work done during the year 1910 has been of a highly original and important nature.

CONCLUSIONS

The work done during the year 1910 has been of a highly original and important nature, and has added to the knowledge of the science of chemistry. It is hoped that the results of this work will be of great value to the scientific community.

Israel Washburn

in this country, John Washburn, came from Eversham, Worcester Co., England, to Duxbury, Mass., in 1631. It is recorded that one of the ancestors of this family was fined £35 by Charles II. for not accepting the Order of Knighthood, and this anecdote illustrates the sturdy manhood that was characteristic of Israel Washburn and his children. He was of the 7th generation in New England and was born in Raynham, Mass., coming to Maine in 1806, and to this town in 1809, when he bought of Artemas Leonard his store and goods, together with his farm on which he lived until his death, Sept. 1, 1876. He and his amiable wife are buried in the Waters Hill Cemetery, overlooking the broad acres of the "Norlands."

Uncle Israel, as he was familiarly called, was a "jolly old soul," and dearly loved by the children, with whom he was a favorite. I well remember when in 1862 the patriotic boys of my neighborhood formed a company and once a week drilled in imitation of real soldiers. On one of these occasions we marched up to Uncle Israel's, and I can now remember, after a lapse of over sixty years, just how he looked, standing on the piazza, leaning on his cane and speaking to us in a patriotic strain and commending our efforts.

During the Civil War, he took great interest in hearing the news both civil and military, and in pleasant weather would often walk to the Post Office, a mile distant, although so blind that only with the assistance of his cane could he keep the road. He invariably talked to himself on these occasions, and many a time have I quietly listened to his criticisms of public men that were more forcible than polite. Although the father of a large family of children whose success in life was almost phenomenal, yet never, when speaking of, or referring to them, did he show the least vanity. His white-faced sorrel horse, "Old Snap," hitched in the high-backed sleigh, was a familiar sight both on the road and at a neighbor's door. Children:

The first part of the history is a general account of the state of the country at the beginning of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the condition of the kingdom, the state of the church, and the character of the people. It also mentions the various wars and conquests which took place during the reign of Henry the First, and the progress of the Norman empire.

The second part of the history is a more particular account of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the various events which took place during his reign, and the progress of the Norman empire. It also mentions the various wars and conquests which took place during the reign of Henry the First, and the progress of the Norman empire.

The third part of the history is a more particular account of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the various events which took place during his reign, and the progress of the Norman empire. It also mentions the various wars and conquests which took place during the reign of Henry the First, and the progress of the Norman empire.

The fourth part of the history is a more particular account of the reign of King Henry the First. It describes the various events which took place during his reign, and the progress of the Norman empire. It also mentions the various wars and conquests which took place during the reign of Henry the First, and the progress of the Norman empire.

He graduated at Brown University in 1814; came to this State, studied law at Paris, Me., was admitted to the Oxford Bar in 1818, and soon after settled at North Livermore, where he had a good practice during the active years of his life. He was Register of Probate for Oxford County, State Senator and a member of Governor Lincoln's Council. He represented the town in the Legislature five years; was Judge of Probate for Androscoggin County. For many years he was Treasurer of the M. & S. Fund and was succeeded by Clarendon Waters, who charged a little more for his services than Washburn had done for doing the same work and it was while criticising Waters' bill in town-meeting that he instantly expired, his last words being, "I think it is a little steep." He was noted for his integrity in all matters and nothing illustrates his character any better than this little anecdote. In the days of "wildcat currency," he collected a bill for some one who never called for the money and after his death it was found in his desk, labelled with the man's name, but in the same paper currency of "wildcat" fame. He came to my house once and requested me to trim his hair and beard, which I did. He then asked me to wet his head and neck with cold water to prevent taking a cold, and after doing as he wished, he asked for my bill. Of course I was glad to accommodate and told him so, refusing any compensation, whereupon he said, "I swear you shall have all of my custom." Children:

WILLIAMS, ELISHA, REV.

B. 1757; d. 1845. In middle life he was allowed by the Massachusetts Legislature to add the name of Scott, to distinguish him from another person of the same name. He married Abigail Livermore, b. 1758; d. 1818, the mother of all his children. 2d, Rebecca Bridge. Elisha Williams was the son of Rev. Eliphalet Williams of East Hartford, Conn., and graduated at Yale College in 1775. Enlisted in the Revolutionary Army as Adjutant of the Regiment in 1776; was in the same boat with Washington when he crossed the Delaware River, Dec. 24, 1776, and in Trumbull's picture of this stirring scene, Adjutant Williams is depicted as holding onto his hat, that it might not be blown away by the wind. He married Abigail, Dea. Livermore's oldest daughter, in 1780, moved to Livermore in 1790 and without doubt settled on the "Ministerial Lot," a part of which is now owned by C. R. Babb. In 1803, after his removal to Brunswick in 1798, Mr. Williams was taxed as a non-resident owner of lots numbered 10 and 36, in this town. He was the first schoolmaster in town and the schoolhouse stood at Gibbs Mills, on the spot where Sylvester Norton, 2d, afterward built his house and the old people said, the "Lot Line" run right through the chimney. Mr. Williams was one of the founders of the Baptist Church, and preached to the people, but was never a settled minister of this church in Livermore. From Brunswick Mr. Williams moved to Beverly, Mass., where he died. His wife, Abigail, kept a diary, which is still in existence and when writing of her life in Livermore and of the changes that had taken place, we find these words, "What hath God wrought—."

Children: Sally P., b. 1782; m. John Appleton (Portland). Nancy Ann, m. Benjamin Giles (Mass.). Sophia, m. John Appleton, 2d wife (Portland). Hannah, b. 1788, m. S. S. Ober (Mass.). Samuel, b. 1790; d. 1818. Edward, b. 1792. Charles, b. 1794; m. Miss Champ. Frances

The first part of the book is devoted to a general history of the United States from its discovery by Columbus in 1492 to the present time. It covers the early years of settlement, the struggle for independence, the formation of the Constitution, and the development of the nation as a great power. The second part of the book is devoted to a detailed history of the United States from 1789 to the present time. It covers the early years of the Republic, the struggle for reform, the Civil War, and the Reconstruction period. The third part of the book is devoted to a detailed history of the United States from 1865 to the present time. It covers the Reconstruction period, the Gilded Age, the Progressive Era, and the modern era.

The book is written in a clear and concise style, and is suitable for use in schools and colleges. It is a valuable source of information for anyone interested in the history of the United States.

Child: 1st wife (5th Gen.) Edith, b. —.

Child: 2d wife, Mildred, d. — infant. Christine, b. —.

This is the only family in town where five generations have lived on the same farm continuously. They were all strong supporters of the Baptist Church at North Livermore.

WING, SAMUEL. (1st Gen.).

M. Hannah Sears in 1755. He came from Harwich, Cape Cod, Mass., to that part of Winthrop which is now Readfield, in 1774. In 1784 he lost his life by an accidental fall from the roof of his house. Among his children were WILLIAM and REUBEN, both of whom were born in Harwich but settled in Livermore.

WING, WILLIAM. (2d Gen.).

B. 1767; d. 1838; m. Cynthia Cooper. He came to Livermore previous to 1788 and built the house still standing and owned and occupied by J. H. Farrington. The house was shingled on roof and walls with shaved pine shingles and many could be seen, in good, serviceable condition after a lapse of 110 years. He sold this farm to FRANCIS LYFORD in 1813 and moved to Freeman and from there to Stetson, where he lived until his death.

WING, REUBEN, and his wife, Aunt Priss, as she was called, lived in "Tollawalla," on the east side of the river, just below Hunton's Rips. Tradition says that he never told of his nativity or from whence he came. He was here as early as 1785 and with the help and under the direction of Dea. Livermore, established and kept the first ferry in town, just below the rips before mentioned. Owing to mysterious proceedings, and more thieving, the neighborhood in which he lived was dealt with severely, by the better class of people in town, so much so, that the "Tollawallians" moved elsewhere. Uncle Reuben and his family moved to Franklin Plantation, and he is the progenitor of all the Wings in that bailiwick.

WINSLOW, THOMAS.

B. 1729; d. 1815, and his wife, Lydia T., b. 1726; d. 1809, came from Freetown, Mass., with their son, Benjamin, in 1802, and bought a farm of Samuel Hillman, now owned by W. A. Thompson and known as the Reuben Brown place. Winslow, Benj., b. 1765, m. Tryphenia Hathaway, b. 1768, a half-sister of Bailey Hathaway. Father and son with their wives, lie buried in the Goding yard with only rugged field stones to mark their resting place. In a diary kept by Benj. while in Freetown and Livermore, we find that he was a shoemaker as well as farmer and that he made four pairs of shoes for $1.00 and took a quarter of veal in part payment. Up to his removal from Freetown in 1802, we find accounts with Ebenezer Hinds the 1st, 2d and 3d, who also emigrated to this town. His children were: Lydia T., b. 1790; m. John Briggs (Sumner). Ruth, b. 1792; d. 1834; m. John Barrett. Thomas, b. 1794; d. 1874; m. Harriet Star (Anson). Gilbert, b. 1796; m. Lydia Barrett. 2d, Mrs. Mary Durfee. Elizabeth W., b. 1802; d. 1831; m. Of these:

NANCY W.

Was the first female child born in Livermore and I remember her as a dear old lady, who always wore a white cap and spoke to little boys.

WYER, CHARLES.

M. Sophronia Shaw and lived at Livermore Center. He was a stone mason by trade and he once ended up a hogshead of molasses and won a bet thereby. Among his children were Charles L., b. 1844; d. 1865. He was a soldier of the Civil War and was killed in battle. The writer remembers well that Charlie Wyer and LeRoy Stevens were both killed in the same battle and buried where they fell, with nothing but the army blanket for a shroud. John W. Bigelow, a discharged soldier, was sent to recover and bring home the remains of these two boys. The funeral of Charlie was held in the old church at Livermore Center and the choir sang at the close of the services, "Home, Sweet Home." Eliza H., a sister of Charles L. Wyer, married Ausma Bemis. She died in 1926, aged 90. Mr. Bemis died in 1910, aged 82.

WHITE, JOHN.

D. 1889, aged 73; m. Mary A. Humphrey, d. 1896, aged 80. He became the owner of the Kidder farm which is said to be at the exact center of the town. He was highly respected by his townspeople and his son, WALLACE H., b. 1849, married a daughter of Senator Wm. P. Frye. Hon. Wallace H. White represented the city of Lewiston and the County of Androscoggin in both Senate and House of Representatives at Augusta. A little incident that was characteristic of his sturdy boyhood during the Civil War, may be mentioned. His father was drawn to serve on the Grand Jury and he left Wallace, a lad of thirteen years, to manage, with the help of a hired man, the home affairs. This hired man was not a Democrat, but a genuine Copperhead, and one day was outspoken against the government and particu-

ORIENTAL STAR LODGE, NO. 21, F. & A. M.

Was organized June 13, 1811. For six years after its organization, the Lodge met at the homes of its prominent members. On one of these occasions they met in the south-west corner chamber of the house of Dr. William B. Small, on Jay Hill, afterward owned and occupied by his son-in-law, Rev. O. H. Johnson. Dr. Small's widow told me this incident connected with a meeting at which a candidate was present and waiting for installation. The Lodge routine was somewhat prolonged and the noon hour being near, Mrs. Small

The first part of the document discusses the general principles of the proposed system. It is intended to provide a clear and concise overview of the main objectives and the scope of the project.

The second part of the document details the specific components and the architecture of the system. This section is crucial for understanding the technical implementation and the data flow within the system.

The third part of the document describes the implementation process, including the development, testing, and deployment phases. It highlights the challenges encountered and the solutions implemented to overcome them.

The fourth part of the document presents the results of the system's performance. It includes a comparison of the system's output against the expected outcomes and a discussion on the overall efficiency and reliability.

The fifth part of the document discusses the future work and the potential for further improvements. It identifies the areas that require further research and development to enhance the system's capabilities.

The sixth part of the document provides a conclusion and summarizes the key findings of the study. It emphasizes the significance of the research and the contributions made to the field.

The seventh part of the document includes a list of references and a bibliography. This section provides a comprehensive list of the sources used in the research and the works cited throughout the document.

The eighth part of the document contains a list of figures and tables. These visual aids are used to present data and results in a clear and accessible manner, facilitating the reader's understanding of the system's performance.

The ninth part of the document provides a list of appendices. These additional sections contain supplementary information that supports the main text but is not essential for a basic understanding of the document.

began to make preparations for dinner. The candidate was still in waiting and as the hours wore away, his uneasiness increased and he asked many nervous questions of the Doctor's wife, but when she put the gridiron over the coals to broil some meat for dinner, he, not seeing any steak, and his mind being apprehensive, quickly asked what she was heating that for, and received the reply, "O, I don't know, they always have it heated when they initiate." Although she was 90 years of age when she told me this story, yet her eyes twinkled when she quaintly remarked, "He took his hat and left immediately, although I was told that afterwards he became a member of the Lodge." In 1818 a hall was built at North Livermore, which was burned and rebuilt in 1857. This hall was burned in 1875 and another, on a new site, was dedicated June 21, 1877. In 1872 twenty-nine members withdrew and organized Whitney Lodge of Canton, and in 1877, twenty-five more withdrew to organize Reuel Washburn Lodge of Livermore Falls and the remaining members, carrying their original name, united with the brethren of Reuel Washburn Lodge.

SOLDIERS IN THE CIVIL WAR

Livermore sent a large quota of men for service in the Civil War. Ninety-six of them were residents and forty-seven came into town or were here temporarily at the time of their enlistment. Twenty-three were killed, wounded fatally, sickened and died and were buried on Southern battlefields or came home in their coffins. Of the entire list of one hundred and forty-three, only three are living today. These are: George W. Robbins of Mechanic Falls; Hebron Norton of Illinois, and Davis T. Timberlake of New Hampshire.

Henry B. Rose never came in from the picket line in the Wilderness; Nathan G. Bartlett died in Andersonville prison; Edwin T. Quimby lies buried under a beech tree on Danfusky Island, Hilton Head; and Philip H. Briggs was buried at sea.

"Blue and Grey"

Major Bishop of Petersburg, Va., Confederate Soldier, and Stephen
Allen of Wing Post, G. A. R., Wayne, Maine

Very faint text or caption located below the illustration, likely describing the subject matter.

Among the prominent members were: Col. Lee Strickland, Lieut. Charles F. Monroe, Lieut. Arad Thompson, Lieut. S. G. Shurtleff, A. C. Pray and Milton F. Ricker.

COLONEL LEE STRICKLAND was as loyal a patriot as ever lived. He raised a company in Livermore and they organized, August 23, 1861. He was elected captain; Augustus H. Strickland, first lieutenant; W. H. Timberlake, second lieutenant; and Charles F. Monroe, orderly sergeant. Aug. 26th they met at Brettun's Mills, but not alone, for every father and mother and sister and brother were there to bid them good-by and the loyal men of Livermore vied with one another for the privilege of conveying them by teams to Augusta.

Strickland was elected Colonel of the regiment, but soon resigned and came home. He traded in the old store that is still used for the same business and he took the only Lewiston Semi-weekly Journal in town. Every Wednesday and Saturday evenings, Robert Casey, an excellent reader, was seated in a chair, on the counter, and read the war news to a full house. Once a "Copperhead" made a disparaging remark about the Lincoln soldiers and like a flash the Colonel had him by the collar and seat of his breeches and unceremoniously out of the store went the offender.

LIEUT. CHARLES F. MONROE was Provost Marshal of the city of Beaufort, S. C., while the Union troops occupied that locality. He was wounded May 18th and killed June 3, 1864, at Cold Harbor, Va.

A. C. PRAY was born near the Norlands and served through the war. He was a very popular singer and represented his town in the Legislature.

LIEUT. THOMPSON was at Gettysburg and fought on Little Round Top. A few years before his death he took his wife to the spot and showed her the very rock that protected him when Pickett made his famous charge. When Gen. Chamberlain was wounded Lieut. Thompson was detailed with twelve soldiers, who in shifts of four, carried the General on an army blanket to the division hospital several miles distant. He was frequently laid down in the shade of some tree and given water, and the soldiers, in conversation, addressed Lieut. Thompson as Arad. At the G. A. R. encampment held in Boston a few of the 20th Regiment with Lieut. Thompson and also Gen. Chamberlain, were on the steamer en route from New York to Boston, and the old comrades invariably addressed Lieut. Thompson as "Arad." The General listened and finally said, "Who is this man you call 'Arad?' The name of the officer in command of the men who carried me to the field hospital was Arad." And then the hands of the Lieutenant and General met in such a grasp as only old soldiers could give.

LIEUT. SYLVAN G. SHURTLEFF was fearfully wounded at Petersburg, Va., and when word reached his mother in Livermore, she immediately started for Washington. Upon her arrival she was informed that no one except on important business, could pass the lines; but as a last resort, she sought Abraham Lincoln, who also told her that no one was allowed to pass the lines except upon important business. She said, "This is important business, for my only boy is dangerously wounded and I must go to him." Here Lincoln's great soul manifested itself by writing the order: "Pass the bearer through the lines. A. Lincoln."

MILTON F. RICKER, who was so well known in Auburn, was taken prisoner and confined in Andersonville until his exchange. The day after his arrival home, callers found him sitting by the window, looking out on the old familiar scenes, with his mouth filled with linen rags to soothe the stings of canker brought about by cruel treatment of the infamous General Wirts.

RESEARCH REPORT NO. 100

The following table shows the results of the experiments conducted during the period from January 1, 1957, to December 31, 1957. The data are presented in two columns, the first column being the results of the first series of experiments and the second column being the results of the second series of experiments. The results are given in terms of the number of plants per acre and the yield of grain per acre.

Series	Planting Date	Harvest Date	Plants/Acre	Yield/Acre
First Series	Jan 15	Jul 15	12,000	150 bushels
	Feb 15	Aug 15	11,500	145 bushels
	Mar 15	Sep 15	11,000	140 bushels
	Apr 15	Oct 15	10,500	135 bushels
Second Series	Jan 15	Jul 15	11,800	148 bushels
	Feb 15	Aug 15	11,300	143 bushels
	Mar 15	Sep 15	10,800	138 bushels
	Apr 15	Oct 15	10,300	133 bushels

The results of the experiments show that the yield of grain per acre is generally higher for the first series of experiments than for the second series of experiments. This is probably due to the fact that the first series of experiments were conducted under more favorable conditions than the second series of experiments.

THE NORTH LIVERMORE READING CLUB

The North Livermore Reading Club originated in 1888, by two or three ladies meeting for the study of literature. The members rapidly increased and with the help and by the guiding hand of Julia Chase Washburn, the club was incorporated June 27, 1916, with thirty-three charter members and at the present time has a membership of forty-two.

By the advice and assistance of Mrs. George E. Hanscome, a very convenient house was purchased, fronting on the Common at North Livermore and by a slight remodelling was converted into a Library building, the shelves of which hold 1,118 books of historic and educational value.

By the efforts of Julia Chase Washburn, a fund of $500.00, the interest of which is to be used toward the usual expenses of this Library, has been raised by the generous gifts of interested friends.

LIVERMORE LIBRARY

The ladies at Brettun's Mills, with financial help from the State and town, have organized a Public Library. They were fortunate in securing the old school-house that stood near the cemetery and with little cost moved it onto a convenient lot on the Canton road. A very slight remodeling converted it into a commodious Library building. Miss Florence A. Nelson was the chief worker in this commendable enterprise and it is owing to her untiring interest and ability that the Library was made a permanent success.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem of the stability of the equilibrium of a system of particles. It is shown that the stability of the equilibrium depends on the nature of the forces acting between the particles. If the forces are attractive, the equilibrium is stable; if they are repulsive, it is unstable.

In the second part of the paper, the stability of the equilibrium of a system of particles is considered in more detail. It is shown that the stability of the equilibrium depends on the nature of the forces acting between the particles. If the forces are attractive, the equilibrium is stable; if they are repulsive, it is unstable.

FRESHETS

- 1838 Ice freshet, west side of Jay bridge carried away. In this freshet Asa Goding lived on the Kilfoyla farm, and he hauled his wife and children in an oxcart, in the night, to higher ground.
- 1846 Mar. 27 Freshet. Saw mill, grist mill, carding mill, Kimball's store swept away, and Pettingill's store and Moody house moved off foundations at Livermore Falls. Ice planed off knoll which was east of landing of Barton's ferry.
- 1869 Pumpkin freshet.
- First Bridge. By the efforts of Col. Huntoon a stock company was formed in 1859 and a wooden bridge erected connecting the towns of East Livermore and Livermore. A man committed suicide by jumping off this bridge.
- March 12, 1871, this bridge was carried off by an ice freshet and Caleb Smith immediately bought up the stock and replaced the bridge with another wooden structure in 1872.
- 1886 Jan. 6 Ice went out of every river in Maine. Saw mill and turning mill and machine shop carried down river at Livermore Falls. Wire cable across Hillman's Ferry broken.
- 1896 Mar. 2 Ice freshet, which swept the last wooden bridge down river, and piled it up a mass of wreckage on Pettingill's Island.

This same year the towns united and the present iron bridge was erected and opened for traffic before snow came. The cost of the bridge was \$13,100. Length from pin to pin 315 feet and one inch. Surface length, 322 feet and $4\frac{1}{4}$ inches. East Livermore paid \$6,810.77 and cares for 167 feet and $7\frac{1}{8}$ inches. Livermore paid \$6,289.23 and cares for 154 feet and $9\frac{1}{8}$ inches. Cost of abutment on Livermore side, \$3,500.00. Cost of filling abutment, \$476.75. The base of the Livermore abutment was drawn back eleven feet and four inches from the base of the old abutment.

THE COLD YEAR OF 1816

Jan. was mild.

Feb. was mild with a few cold days.

Mar. was cold and windy and then mild.

Apr. was warm but grew colder and was like winter at close.

May was cold, corn killed, replanted and again killed.

Ice formed an inch thick, birds frozen.

June colder than May, snow ten inches deep in some places, fruit blighted and robins frozen to death, corn killed except on hills.

August was cold, ice half-inch thick.

Sept., first two weeks warm, then frosty and cold.

Oct. colder than usual.

Nov. cold with sleighing.

Dec. pleasant.

Corn of 1815 sold for seed in 1817 from $2.00 to $3.00 per bushel. Wheat the same, flour eight and ten cents per pound.

1817 crops bounteous.

HEIGHTS ABOVE SEA LEVEL

From the origin of the Androscoggin river to tide water at Brunswick is 150 miles, with a fall of 1256 feet. Height above tidewater of points on river or railroads: Danville Junction, 180 feet; Auburn Depot, 210 feet; Lewiston Depot, 212 feet; Leeds, 260 feet; Mechanic Falls Depot, 270 feet; E. Livermore Depot, 360 feet; Rumford Falls at its brink, 600 feet; Bear Mountain, 1265 feet.

SABATUS

Rev. Paul Coffin, in his Memoirs, tells of an interview with "Sabatus," an Indian Chief, in which the Indian states that Norridgewock means Stillwater. Merocomecook, same as Rocomeco, semi-circle of water. Megunticook, waves dashing against each other. Wessurmumscot, clay stream. Madamascontee, many little alewives. Pemmaquid, point of land running into water. Magahunta, the Devil. Chinus, God. No. 1 was Temple. Goshen, Vienna. Tyngtown, Wilton. Titcombtown, Anson. Pennycook, Rumford. Littleborough, Leeds. Hook, Hallowell. Cobbosseecontee, Gardiner, Sudbury. Canada, Bethel. Piggwacket, Fryeburg.

CYCLONES

I have heard old people tell of a cyclone that passed over the vicinity of the Norlands in the year 1818 and lifted the roof of the school-house, which at that time stood on the westerly side of the road. The school was in session at the time and William Coolidge, who was one of the scholars, said that the first intimation they had of anything unusual, the westerly roof lifted enough to show daylight and immediately shut down.

And again the 3d of July, 1892, after a warm, showery forenoon, a cyclone started in the town of Buckfield, passed over Bear Pond, the Norlands and, scaling the top of Bradbury Hill, dipped down onto the Atwood farm, uprooting apple and forest trees, tore the roof off the ell of the house, swept a carriage house and contents easterly across the road and smashed it onto a stone wall, and swinging across the valley, with a motion that made one think of an elephant's trunk feeling for a wisp of hay, levelled a stable on the Fred Merrill farm, occupied by Frank Lindsey, and as it crossed the river lifted tons of water on to the intervale and sweeping up to Haines Morrison's swung one of his barns entirely off its foundation. The last heard of the whirling, roaring, tunnel-shaped black cloud, was in the town of Vienna.

SCHOOL-HOUSES, ANCIENT AND MODERN

- Dis. No. 1 school-house was at the four corners of the road at the foot and on the westerly side of Butter Hill.
- Dis. No. 2 school-house stood very near the cemetery at Brettun's Mills, but in 1915 a new house with double rooms was built on the road leading to Canton.
- Dis. No. 3 school-house was at the foot of the Columbus Alden Hill until moved to its present position in 1908.

[Illegible text block]

- Dis. No. 4 school-house is still standing midway between T. S. Goding's and the foot of the Bickford Hill.
- Dis. No. 5 school-house was near the junction of the E. R. Boothby road and that running northerly and southerly through South Livermore, but alas for the old red school-house in which so many lyceums have been held, it now serves as a horse-shed for the Advent Chapel nearby.
- Dis. No. 6 school-house stood just north of Job Chase's house, but this little red school-house, in which the writer studied his first primer under the excellent teaching of Daniel Lara, fell into disuse and a new house was built a few rods farther to the north.
- Dis. No. 7 school-house is used for a town office.
- Dis. No. 8. In 1927 a new double-room school-house was built at North Livermore, superseding all others.
- Dis. No. 9 school-house stood very near and just north of the house of Worcester B. Cole, on the easterly side of the road a half-mile south of the J. H. Bigelow place. It was succeeded by a new double-room house at Livermore Center in 1900.
- Dis. No. 10 called the "Bush school-house," still stands as a summer residence, at the junction of the Norlands and Gibbs Mills roads.
- Dis. No. 11 had the only brick school-house in town, built in 1832, and served as such for 35 years when a wooden structure was built about 50 rods to the south on land of George Gibbs; this, too, has disappeared like many others. The brick house stood very near where the barn of N. A. Hinds now stands. I remember hearing Charles Otis Thompson tell of a terrible thrashing that William Wilson gave Jacob Haskell, because he couldn't spell bureau. Lewis M. Wing was one of the teachers in this school-house and George C. Wing of Auburn, learned his lessons in the primer here and steadily rose from the front to the back seat.

- Dis. No. 12 house is still intact but used for a dwelling house.
- Dis. No. 13 school-house was the poorest, as such, of any in town. It stood very near to the junction of the Tollawally with the Strickland Ferry road and was burned in 1889:
- Dis. No. 14 school-house stood just north of the home of F. A. Leavitt, but when the house was built at Livermore Center, it was abandoned and is now the stable of the Jason Fogg place.
- Dis. No. 15 school-house was on the Neison road and it was called the Nelson district, but it was abandoned in 1891.
- Dis. No. 16 school-house is still standing at the junction of the A. W. Jackson road with the Goding Hill road. It is stripped of its seats and is unoccupied.
- Dis. No. 17, called the Union school because pupils from the town of Jay as well as those from Livermore, attended. It stood about 100 rods south of Jay line on the road leading from North Livermore to Jay Bridge. It was the only school-house with the tiers of seats rising from the teacher's desk to the back side that the writer ever saw. It was abandoned in 1888.

OLD SCHOOL-HOUSES

The first school-house in town stood in the angle made by the junction of the Fish meadow and Cat Corner roads, nearly opposite to the cellar of the Maj. Fish house. It is an interesting fact that "Lyceums" were held in this house.

Another school-house, and some accounts give it as being first, stood in the dooryard or on the foundation of the house at Gibbs Mills, now owned by L. L. Riggs. It is handed down to us that Henry Bond taught school in this house.

A school-house stood in the Wyman cemetery and bricks of the chimney can still be seen. It was burned after an exciting school meeting, under suspicious circumstances.

Another school-house stood on the easterly side of the road and at the south-west corner of the J. T. Lyford farm. This, too, was burned under the same circumstances as the one in the Wyman cemetery.

Another stood not far from the river just south of the Caleb Smith house and in 1851 it was moved to No. 12 and can still be seen.

A school-house at one time stood half way from the J. H. Bigelow house, southerly to the brook.

The first school-house at North Livermore stood on the north side of the road, and in the garden of L. M. Pike. It had two fireplaces and any gathering for social benefit was held here. Once when Horace Gould wanted to teach a singing school, a meeting was held in the school-house and the three Baptist Deacons sat as a committee to decide on his qualifications, which, to his relief, were favorable.

TRADITIONS ABOUT THE PONDS OF LIVERMORE AND DEATHS BY DROWNING

charge of his gun, which now lies at the bottom of the pond. The greatest depth of water in this pond is fifty-six feet. Mrs. Ida Merrill Morse was accidentally drowned in this pond Aug. 20, 1916.

Long Pond is one mile and ninety-six rods long and is constantly lessening in length, by sediment washed down by "Puddle Dock" brook. But one death by drowning is known, a son of G. W. Hanscom, on July 4, 1867. The greatest depth of water in this pond is twenty-eight feet.

Bartlett's Pond, near the center of the town, is smaller than the above mentioned, although of considerable size. Its area was determined by Nelson Fuller, as twenty-eight acres. Seven cases of drowning are recorded as taking place in this body of water. The first, a daughter of Daniel Lovewell, who lived nearby, attempted to cross the lower end, near the outlet, on the ice in the late spring. In 1817 three boys were drowned in this pond. One was Nathan Monroe, a son of Abel, one was a Folsom, and the third unknown. In 1825 a young man by the name of Bicknell lost his life in this pond. And again in 1922 Matti Yakso and Rireka Hiekkinen, two Finlanders, accidentally lost their lives by drowning.

There is one other pond in town, a large and beautiful sheet of water near Brettun's Mills, formerly called Turner's Pond. I made diligent inquiry of several old people as to its name and their belief was that a man by the name of Turner was drowned in this pond. Menzious Bryant, aged nine, a son of David, was drowned in this pond in 1855. His body not being immediately found, a cannon was brought from Wilton to be discharged on the shore, under the impression that the body would rise to the surface at the report. His body being finally found rendered this proceeding unnecessary. A girl by the name of Stella Lewis drowned herself in this pond in 1888. The old sheepskin map of the town, calls this beautiful sheet of water, "Ramshead Pond."

Ebenezer Campbell, b. 1805, was drowned at the upper dam of the mill stream in 1821.

John Doe was drowned at the lower dam of the mill stream April 25, 1902.

There is a small pond on the westerly brow of Hamlin Hill that has no inlet. It is about a hundred rods long and from its clear, spring-like waters many edible fish are caught. In this pond, called Nelson Pond, Charles H. Goding, b. 1816, son of Spencer Goding, was drowned.

POWDER HOUSE AND POUND

A round brick powder house with a conical roof and plastered on the inside, was built in 1807, as a magazine for the powder and bullets, furnished by the town for the old-time militia. It stood on the south side of the road, easterly from Dea. Livermore's house, and in a stone wall running northerly and southerly. It was nearly demolished in 1862 and only those who did it, can tell the reason. The foundation can still be seen.

Notwithstanding a vote of the town, to build in some other place, a pound was built on the old road leading westerly from the house of G. A. Gordon, past the south end of Long Pond, to the Waters Hill road. Its high stone walls are still standing and only the old road leading easterly from the foot of the pond as far as the pound is discontinued.

"STORIES TOLD BY THE FIRELIGHT"

They were all seated around the open fire and their faces beamed with the expectation of an evening spent in story telling. Aunt Dorcas wiped her spectacles and said that one evening when she lived in Sumner, she was sitting alone, in a room, the ceiling of which had been covered with old-fashioned split board laths, but not plastered. They were troubled with rats, and on this particular night they were romping overhead and one old fellow stopped just over my head and his tail dropped through a crack and hung down full length. Silently I arose and with my shears cut his tail off smack and smooth to the hilt. Such a scampering and squealing I never heard and for more than a year not a rat was seen or heard. Then Albion said, "Did you ever hear of Roberts' white-eyed beans? Well! Drake clerked for Gus Coolidge and Roberts stepped into the store one morning and said, 'I want a quart of white-eyed beans!' Drake took the quart measure and went into the back room where all such things were kept. Pretty soon he came back and said, 'Augustus, I can't find a white-eyed bean anywhere!' and Gus replied, 'White beans, you darn fool.'"

Then Tom spoke up and said, "That isn't half so good as when Gus Wills was asked what the man's name was who had just moved into his house, and he answered, 'His name's Hartford and he's from Sumner, or his name's Sumner and he's from Hartford, and I'll be dumb if I know which.'"

And then Aunt Fannie, who delighted in hearing these stories, said that when the toll bridge spanned the Androscoggin river, people, in the winter time who were obliged to cross, anxiously awaited for the ice to become firm enough to hold loaded teams with safety. One time, people on foot had crossed, but no team had ventured to do so. One morning a stranger drove up to the crossing and inquired of Wint Hinds, who was near, "If it was safe to cross?" and Wint said, "I guess so. Elder Wyman has just gone over, and if it will hold him, the Devil can go." Then William, who thus far had remained silent, stroked his chin whiskers and said, "Did you ever hear of Sam Parks? He was in company with Dea. Sanders, when they had a trip-hammer shop at Gibbs Mills, but sold out and went into trade at Livermore Falls. He was a good mechanic, but without his guiding hand, the machinery would not work well. The Deacon and his son-in-law, Alonzo, would go into the shop and pump the bellows and it would squeak, 'Where's Sa-a-a-m, where's Sa-a-a-m?' and Alonzo would start the trip-hammer and it would say, 'Behind the counter selling rum. Behind the counter selling rum' (accenting every other syllable)."

Uncle Ira said, "I wish we could hear a true story!" and Tom said, "I'll tell you one and I can vouch for every word of it, for I was there." It was when we worked repairing the roads under the Highway District system. We were working on the old discontinued road from Bartlett's Corner westerly to the Bog brook; the hill of which was often in bad condition. Bartlett had a large sized, steel-plated wooden plow which we were using, drawn by three pairs of oxen, with Bartlett at the handles, and Frank Sawtelle and myself riding the beam and down hill, too. You can imagine the furrow that this outfit made. Bartlett was credited on his highway tax, with 25 cents per day for the use of this plow. He also had brewed in a large iron kettle, enough beer to fill a three-gallon jug; made from boxberry, winter-green, spruce twigs, a little yeast, a handful of hops and a small bag of corn. This he brought on to the road and was willingly credited with 25 cents more on his tax, for this delicious, cooling drink. It was a very warm day and Perry Stevens, the Surveyor, seated himself in the shade of the bushes by the side of the road and fanned himself with his straw hat. Blind Ransom Norton, who lived in this district, could work out his tax by following along the gutter and by feeling the loose stones with his hands, throw them out; one of these hit Stevens on the head and over he went, to the alarm of everybody. Well; we got over that incident and were all busy working when, crack! went something, and Norton had ruined the jug, placed in a shady spot, with another stone. Bartlett demanded 25 cents more credit on his tax. It was unanimously agreed that he was entitled to that sum. The next day, it was learned that when Bartlett took the kettle of beer off the crane and set it on the floor to cool, that one of his children accidentally sat down in it."

George B., who had laughed heartily at these stories, said: "Very near to my birthplace lived a queerly mated couple, who eked a living somehow or other, by fishing, picking berries or spinning. Their hut-like house stood on the west bank of "Nigger Brook," which bears this name because the man was a negro by the name of David Too, and his wife was an Indian squaw. David died in 1859 and as the town gave them assistance, his wife asked the selectmen to give her a pint of camphor to rub on David's face until his burial. This they did, but instead of David's face being embalmed by the use of camphor, she drank it all. The third day after, she was with David."

Uncle Joe, who until this time had remained quiet, said: "Will you allow me to speak a word?" Every one said, "Why! yes, Uncle Joe, tell us a good story!" "'Taint much of a story," said Joe, "but once I was doing sumthin' or other by the side of the road, and two men rode up and asked me if I had a horse to sell. I told 'em yes, but he was up in the paster on the hill and I didn't believe they wanted him. They said, 'Why?' And I said, 'he had three outs!' They wanted to know what they were! I said one of them was, he was terrible hard to ketch when out to paster, and they said that was nothing, for they always kept their horses in the stable. Then they wanted to know what t'other fault was and I told them he always stuck his head clear in the water up to the winkers, when you watered him in a tub side of the road. They didn't seem to think that was anything bad, then they asked what the other fault was, and I said I couldn't think just then! Strange! for I thought on't a minute ago. Funny! I can't think on't! And they said, 'We're going further on to see a horse and when we come back, mebbly you'll think what it is.' Bimeby they come back and said, 'Have you thought what that other out is?' and I said, 'Twas funny, but you hadn't been gone two minutes afore I thought what 'twas!' They said, 'Tell us;' and I said, 'He ain't good for nothing, after you ketch him!'"

Uncle Job, who through all this story telling had shown his uneasiness by shrugging his shoulders and twirling his cane, spoke up and said, "Now I will tell you a patriotic story. During the Rebellion, patriotism ran high in Livermore; even the boys caught the enthusiasm and named their sleds after some popular soldier hero. One young man who outspokenly showed his sympathy for the South, cut the name of Jeff Davis on his sled. One day he visited No. 7 District school and brought this sled. When the school was dismissed, he was greatly surprised and angered to find the board seat on which the name was cut, missing, and of course laid the theft or trick to the school boys, which they all denied, telling him that Henry B. Bradford had passed by the school-house breaking the road with two pairs of oxen, and just as likely as not, he had committed the dastardly outrage; so the next time he met Henry, he laid the misdemeanor to him. Henry said, 'I didn't do it, but if I had been going to school I would have done it!'" Aunt Ruth said, "Don't that sound just like Henry!" Charles O., whose boyhood days had been spent in Livermore, said: "I used to visit Uncle Israel's boys and on one of these occasions, William Drew told me that the day before Adoniram Brown called there and wanted a mug of cider. Uncle Israel told William Drew to give him a drink and Adoniram, after taking two or three swallows, clasped his hands around the mug and looking up, said: "This is nourishing. This is nourishing." Before I came home, Uncle Israel asked me if my father had a good crop of corn. I told him, yes. He said that he did. And a good crop, too, and that it was a fine rich color; yallar as gold. Then Aunt Dorcas said that she knew a family in Sumner that saved the longest corn cob as a backscratcher, until the next husking time."

Cyrus, who until now hadn't spoken a word, said: "When Frank was down to Hallowell, he heard Billy Wilson tell of a hunting experience that he had when he went up to Dead River, last fall. He sighted a five-pointed buck about two hundred yards away, and taking careful aim, he drew a bead on him. He saw the dust fly just in front of the buck and to his astonishment he dropped in his tracks stone dead, and not a mark or sign of a bullet could be found on the buck. Now, what killed him?" Albion's head went up and laughing heartily, he said, "That's easy to explain. The bullet struck the ground just in front of the buck, glanced upward into his nostril and down into his interior and the buck died of appendicitis."

Uncle Abijah, who never said anything but what hit the nail on the head, told of his neighbor Woodman, who prided himself on his ability to outhoe and hoe corn and potatoes better than any other man. He said that Woodman, who had a stiff leg, and his son, Elisha, were hoeing potatoes, and Woodman criticised Elisha's work, saying that at the second cultivating a great difference would be seen in the growth of weeds in the rows that he hoed and in those hoed by Elisha. Woodman cut notches in a rail of the fence opposite to the rows that he had hoed and as he thought, unbeknown to Elisha. At some convenient time, Elisha turned the rail end for end and at the next hoeing, lo and behold, the rows opposite to the notches on the rail showed the most weeds. Woodman leaned on the rail and casually looked anywhere but at the marks. Elisha asked him, "Father, what 're you looking at?" Woodman replied, "O, nothing." Once Benjamin worked for him hoeing, and Ben said "he never would again, for Woodman dragged his stiff leg on one side of the row and only hoed the other and no man living could keep up with him."

Aunt Fannie said: "I'll tell just one more story. You remember that when Seth D. Washburn sold his place at North Livermore, he gave people the impression that he intended to remove out of the State. Well! his friends would ask him where he thought he would locate, and to all such questions he would answer the name of that hot place that we know so very little about. One day, Aunt Jane was walking past the Washburn dooryard, intending to call on Lucinda, and seeing Seth in his shop door, she stopped and said in her soft, smooth voice, 'Mr. Washburn! I hear that you are going to the place from which no one ever returned and I wish, when you get there, that you would write to me, telling what you find and what you see!' Quick as a flash Seth replied, 'You needn't worry. You needn't worry. You'll know plenty soon enough yourself.'"

Uncle John, who could tell many stories about the pioneers of Livermore, said "That when he was a young man, there was a religious excitement in the south end of the town, in which people would become insensible and fall down to the ground and have a view of Heaven and Hell. One such, afterwards describing what he saw, said 'That the Methodist, Baptist, Advents and Spiritualists were all in Heaven,' whereupon Jonathan Morse asked, 'Did you see any Universalists there?' and the answer was, 'No, not one.' 'Ah!' Jonathan replied, 'you didn't look into the parlor, then.'"

And for the first time, Uncle Alanson spoke, saying: "All is, that's enough for the present. Let me tell you something that is true. One fall, I made calculations to go to Hallowell with a load of farm produce and I arranged everything so as to start at two o'clock in the morning. The night before I greased the wooden axles of my wagon, in the doorway, right where I intended to load, in the morning, and, as I thought, replaced all the iron linchpins. I started as I intended and at Hallowell exchanged my load for such things as the family would need for the coming winter. When I arrived at the Lowney corner, on my way home, one of the wheels came off. I replaced it and searched about for the missing linchpin, but was unable to find it, so I walked and watched the wheel continually, until I reached home about midnight, leaving the wagon in the yard. In the morning I found the linchpin on the ground, right where I left it the night before when I greased the axles. In those days the axles were pitched so that the wheels run on and stood under." Then some one said to Stearns, "You used to sing in the choir! Give us a song!" Stearns said, "If I did, I guess it would be 'Homeward Bound,'" and then those old faces that I knew so well, faded from view, and their voices grew fainter and fainter; the fire flickered on the hearth, and there was darkness.

And so my task is ended. Had I delayed in the collection of these records until the present time, much of it would have been an impossibility, for the lips of those who could tell us the unwritten secrets of our history, are closed forever. If I should dedicate this book to those who helped me in the undertaking, the names of Reuben Fuller, John Campbell, Laura Phillips, Abby Monroe Faxon, L. M. Wing, Sarah Hinds, P. S. Gibbs, Samuel Fuller, Russell B. Hersey, H. B. Bradford, Fanny Smith, J. D. Thompson and Peter Morrill Leavitt, come to me in grateful remembrance.
